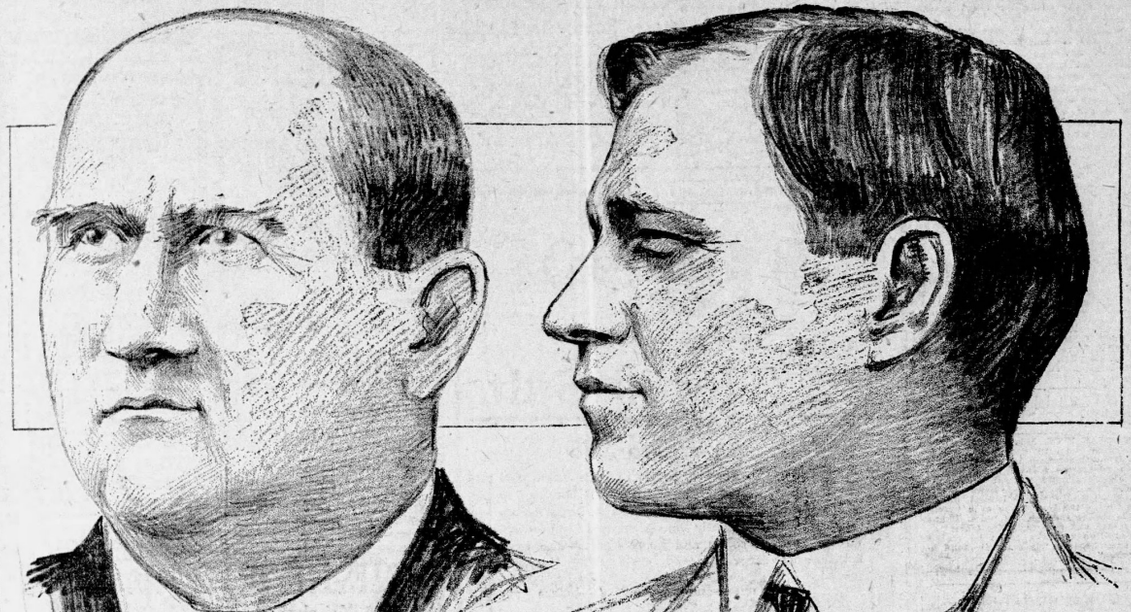
THEY CLOSE THE ARGUMENTS IN FAMOUS FRANK TRIAL



Attorney Luther Z. Rosser (on left) for the defense, and Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey. Mr. Rosser had not concluded his argument when court recessed for lunch. Solicitor Dorsey will follow Mr. Rosser.

DALTON EXCORIATED, CONLEY ANNIHILATED AND SOLICITOR CHARGED WITH PERSECUTION

Mr. Rosser Defends the Character of the Pencil Factory, Declares That Few Men Could Have Stood the Test Put to Frank by a "Horde of Spying Police, Generaled by Dorsey," and Ridicules the "Suspicious Circumstances" Against Frank

EVERYTHING FRANK DID OR SAID WAS DISTORTED, MAGNIFIED AND VIEWED WITH SUSPICION, HE SAYS

Mr. Rosser Was in the Midst of His Speech When Court Adjourned for Recess–When He Has Finished Solicitor Dorsey Will Make the Concluding Argument, the Judge Will Deliver His Charge and the Case Go to the Jury

Attorney Luther Z. Rosser, making the closing argument for the defense, spoke to the jury three hours and twenty minutes Friday, taking up the whole of the morning session.

When court took recess for lunch Mr. Rosser plainly showed the strain. His shirt was wet with perspiration and his thin alpaca coat stuck to his shoulders. His hands trembled from his tremendous physicale xertion, his throat was sore and his voice hoarse. From the courtroom he went immediately to a throat specialist for treatment.

It seemed, after Attorney Arnold's speech, that he had covered the whole ground and left nothing for his associate to say. But Mr. Rosser found a plenty.

He jokingly told the reporters, on Thursday, that his job was to do "the heavy-set rowing." What he meant was that he would touch on the high lights of the case.

His style is quite different from Mr. Arnold's, but no less effective. A big, burly man physically, he throws into his delivery the whole strength and vigor of his physique and personality. He abounds in picturesque expressions. He is not particular about his grammar. He can tell a funny story with fine skill. In flaying Dalton, Conley, the city detectives, and Solicitor Dorsey, wrathful indignation gathers in his countenance like a storm cloud and the words peal forth like thunderbolts.

Mr. Rosser said he would probably speak an hour in the afternoon but he may speak two or more. And in this latter event there is practically no chance for the case to go to the jury Friday afternoon, since Solicitor Dorsey is yet to speak and is certain to require three hours or more. There is a possibility, however, that all speeches will be concluded and the judge's charge delivered before adjournment and Frank's fate left to the decision of the jury.

The first two hours of Attorney Rosser's speech, which he began when court convened Friday morning at 9 o'clock, was devoted to a scathing attack on C. B. Dalton, a state witness; to a defense of the moral atmosphere pervading the National pencil factory, and to a defense of the character of Leo M. Frank, the defendant.

Mr. Rosser's speech was one of the most picturesque ever heard in a Fulton county courtroom. He described Dalton, as a lying thief, declared the moral atmosphere of the pencil factory was as good as that of any factory in Georgia, and referred to Frank's statement on the stand as the most remarkable he had ever heard.

"This statement came gushing forth from the wells of truth," said Mr. Rosser. Referring to Frank's character Mr. Rosser said: "We put his character on trial. Had we not done so the law would have compelled you to assume that it was good. We wanted you to know the manner of man he is."

Mr. Rosser made light of the witnesses who testified that Frank's character was bad. He declared that disgruntled, aggrieved persons could be found who would give this kind of testimony against any man—"even the judge who is presiding over this trial."

Frequently during his speech Mr. Rosser turned aside to attack Solicitor Dorsey for what he termed an unparalleled and unjust persecution. He predicted that the solicitor would live to see the day that he would regret his course in this case and declared the like would never be witnessed again.

Mr. Rosser devoted the principal portion of his speech toward an effort to explain away the various circumstances which have been used by the state to cast suspicion on Frank. He took them up one by one.

Frank's nervousness on the day after the murder was characterized as but natural under the circumstances. His failure to hear the telephone ring when the detectives rang him up early Sunday morning attributed to his good digestion and clean conscience which made him sleep soundly.

The fact that he engaged attorneys almost immediately after the police took him to the station house was explained on the ground that he acted upon the advice of friends and was unfamiliar with police and detectives.

Frank's employment of the Pinkerton detective agency on the day he was detained at police headquarters, Mr. Rosser declared, to his desire to ferret out the mystery and catch the murderer.

Various other circumstances, termed "mere suspicions," by Mr. Rosser, were explained to the jury, and after disposing of each one Mr. Rosser would inquire of the jury: "Would you hang a man for that?"

At 5:04 o'clock Friday morning the Frank trial resumed for what promised to be its last day outside of the jury room. Mr. Rosser continued the argument of the defense begun so ably Thursday by his associate, Mr. Arnold. Following Mr. Rosser, Solicitor Dorsey was to conclude the arguments by presenting the final statement of the state's view.

"Gentlemen of the jury, all things must come to an end," began Mr. Rosser. "And the end of this case is almost here. I feel without regret that the masterly effort of Mr. Arnold yesterday has left me but little to say. My physical condition is such that I could not make a long speech if I would. And I would not attempt to add to what Mr. Arnold has put before you so effectively, were it not for my intense interest in this matter, and my profound conviction. I repeat what Mr. Arnold said, that this jury is of so high quality that the attitude of the juror's mind is not to be compared with the careless man walking in the street.

"My friend Hooper must have brought that doctrine with him. Minds may wander as they will in flights of fancy and fits of rhetoric, and they do no harm. But you have been concentrated upon a different task; and you have ceased to be the rollicking, careless men of the streets. In pagan Rome the people laughed and chaffed as they went about. But there were a few set apart —the vestal virgins—for sacred things. And so with you, gentlemen.

THE JURY'S POSITION.

"The balance of Atlanta's citizens may laugh, take things by hearsay and by prejudice; but not so with you. For you are set apart and purged by your oaths from prejudice and bias. For you there is no bending except toward the sworn evidence in the case. And you are without the echo of the hostile mob or overzealous friends. You have no fear or favor of affection. Others may hesitate at the task of standing up for the oppressed, but not so with you. You are a silent, consecrated body that can hear no cry of derision; you will do your duty, which is consecrated by justice and approved by law.

"I cannot discuss this case as I feel I ought, but in the higher places I may with modesty go over what my brother Arnold so ably discussed yesterday. I do not think though, that there is any field that he has not thoroughly explored.

"Let us consider this crime, now. What is the first suggestion that comes

New York Chauffeur Arrested on Charge of Aiding Thaw's Escape–May Be Given to New York Authorities

(By Associated Press.)

SHERBROOKE, Aug. 22.—The hearing in the case of the self-styled "Mitchell Thompson," charged with aiding a lunatic—Harry K. Thaw—in crossing the Canadian frontier, was postponed today until Friday next because documents from Matteawan, showing that Thaw had been confined there and is insane, had not arrived here.

Thompson came into court disguised by a pair of smoked glasses. Pictures of "Gentleman Roger" had arrived during the night, however, and Sheriff Hornbeck of Dutchess county, holding one of these, after gazing at the prisoner, said:

"Who could miss it? It certainly is Roger."

When arrested in the superior court room here Thompson maintained that he was a citizen of Toronto and that he had met Thaw by chance. However, he retained as counsel one of the group of lawyers engaged to represent Thaw, although Thaw had up to today declined to admit he had ever seen Thompson or that there was under arrest here any one of the quintet who took part in his dash from the asylum in Dutchess county.

Sheriff Hornbeck, of Duchess county, although coming here primarily to watch the Thaw case, has a warrant charging Thompson with conspiring with others to bring about Thaw's escape and he said he hoped that the proceedings today would result in the prisoner being surrendered for return to the state of New York.

Seven witnesses, it is said, would be produced to show that Thompson accompanied Thaw across the Canadian border. Among them was Octave Nedeau, his wife, and two men employed on his farm near Coaticook. Nedeau has said it was he who furnished the rig for Thaw's last dash before his arrest, and that Thompson accompanied them.

THAW'S SISTER LEAVES.

Thaw's sister, Margaret Thaw Carnegie, and his brother-in-law, George Lauder Carnegie, left Sherbrooke last night after conferring with his lawyers and ascertaining everything was being done to protect his interests. The habeas corpus proceedings not being due until Tuesday, Thaw endeavored to make up a complete case. He will take all the facts that have come to his hands, including his grounds for the course he has pursued, and will

WILSON BELIEVES HUERTA'S RULE WILL END AT EARLY DATE

President Will Launch Crusade of Adverse Public Sentiment Against Mexican Dictator Who Scorned His Proposals

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—As the next step in the solution of the Mexican difficulty a world-wide wave of public sentiment is to be launched against Huerta, acting president of Mexico, and his colleagues.

It was stated upon authority today that all of the civilized governments of the world are being informed through the United States ambassadors and ministers of the steps that have been taken to bring peace to Mexico and of the nature of the tenders declined by Huerta. Upon the same authority it was learned that President Wilson, within the next day or two—perhaps before the end of the week—will send a special message to congress for the purpose of giving the people of the United States the same information.

President Wilson personally will read his message on Mexico to both houses of congress Monday, outlining what has been done by the United States to bring about peace. He worked practically all today on it. Except for a short conference with Secretary Bryan the president denied himself to all visitors.

BRYAN WARNS HUERTA.

Curt warning to both the Huerta and constitutionalist commanders at La Bouguilla, Chihuahua, Mexico, that the United States will hold them personally responsible for any violence against Americans by "any one claiming civil or military authority," was sent today by Secretary Bryan through American Consul Letcher at Chihuahua City.

White House officials feel that the reading of the message will itself be a factor in the situation, serving perhaps further to emphasize that the United States will under no circumstances recognize any but constitutional government in Mexico.

The president is now at work on the preparation of this message. He will include in it the instructions to John Lind when he was sent to Mexico, the delivery of the United States proposals to Huerta and the reply of Huerta. This last is contained in a message of several thousand words, which has been three days coming over the cable in the City of Mexico, and Wilson will make this public in full.

It is the president's intention to make up a complete case. He will take all the facts that have come to his hands, including his grounds for the course he has pursued, and will

Police Search for Thugs Who Placed Bomb Under Mayor's Window – Gaynor Is Abandoned by Tammany Contingent and May Make Independent Race

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The police are searching for the person or persons who placed four sticks of dynamite wrapped in a piece of bright cambric cloth in an areaway of the city hall directly beneath Mayor Gaynor's window.

The alleged attempt to blow the mayor up with dynamite is the more interesting owing to the fact that he has been turned down as the next mayoralty candidate by the Tammany contingent. Despite the fact that a conference of Tammany leaders have refussed to favor him as their next candidate, it is said that the mayor may make the race as an independent candidate.

A piece of bright colored cambric was the principal clue today in the investigation of the city hall bomb mystery. The cambric was wrapped around the four sticks of dynamite found yesterday in an areaway directly below Mayor Gaynor's window.

The bomb was anything but a hoax, for the fuse had been lighted and had gone out just before the spark reached the detonator.

An explosion would have demolished the side of the building. The detectives, however, could not decide where the dynamite was meant for the mayor or for some one in the marriage license bureau, or was planted as a protest against the city government in general.

The cambric wrapper directed the search today among Italian workmen employed in blasting out the new subway. A shaft of the subway opens near the city hall. The cambric was a kind that is popular among Italian working women. The dynamite was too carefully arranged to admit a theory that it was dropped by accident.

The New York mayoralty election will find Edward E. McCall, chairman of the public service commission, pitted as the Tammany candidate against John Purroy Mitchel, collector of the port, as the fusion nominee for mayor. Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany hall, and a number of his advisors, after a conference last night were said to have proposed that Mr. McCall accept the Tammany nomination and to have urged him to give his answer to this proposal today.

He announced later that he would accept the offer of Tammany Hall leaders of designation as their candidate for mayor of New York City.

At the start of the conference the renomination of Mayor Gaynor was proposed but ap praentlddiyiSHRDLoooo posed but apparently did not meet with favor.

With McCall named as the Tammany candidate there remains a possibility that the mayoralty campaign will become a triangular contest, as there is an independent movement urging Mayor Gaynor to seek re-election regardless of the Tammany and Fusion choices.

O'NEAL HITS HOBSON IN SCATHING REPLY

Controversy Over Clayton Appointment Leads to Hot Speeches

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 22.—Caustic and sarcastic language was used by Governor O'Neal yesterday afternoon in lengthy reply he made to a fusilade of attacks from Congressman Richmond Pearson Hobson growing out of the governor's appointment of Henry D. Clayton as federal senator to succeed the late Joseph F. Johnston.

Captain Hobson, himself a candidate for the senate, initiated the squabble when he branded the governor's appointment of Clayton as the result of a deeply laid political plot. The governor retaliated with a statement to the effect that Captain Hobson had told him in Birmingham that an appointment by him of a senator would be valid. During this week Congressman Hobson came back with a hot interview, denouncing the governor's statement.

In his reply yesterday afternoon Governor O'Neal, detailing Captain Hobson's charges, declares that his "rhetoric is as astonishing and shocking as his logic." He says the captain has unwittingly jumped into a "cul de sac," and that even the "resources of the hero of the Merrimac cannot serve to rescue him from his pitiable dilemma."

The governor repeatedly insists that keen disappointment prompted Captain Hobson's attack. Such words as "dark conspiracy," "sinister interests," and other like phrases, the governor declares, "dance through his article in all the mazes of metaphorical confusion."

Rowing Contest

BARTLETT TO PROBE SPEER CHARGES FOR GEORGIA DELEGATION

Confers With House Committee Which Considers Allegations and Reports Back to Georgia Congresmen Soon

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The Georgia congressional delegation, by unanimous vote, today deputized Congressman Charles L. Bartlett, of Macon, as a committee of one to confer with the house judiciary committee, and report at the earliest practicable date the character of the charges which have been lodged against Federal Judge Emory Speer by the department of justice, with the knowledge and consent of President Wilson. Bartlett will get in touch with Chairman Clayton, of the judiciary committee, this afternoon and may be ready to lay the facts before the Georgia delegation early next week.

While the delegation's meeting marked an important step in the threatened impeachment proceedings against the Georgia jurist, the action of the delegation in no wise commits it as a whole, or its members as individuals to institute or support impeachment proceedings against Judge Speer.

Congressmen Howard, Roddenbery, Tribble and Edwards were the only members of the delegation absent from the caucus, and Edwards by proxy was held by Congressman Adamson.

SPIRIT OF OPEN-MINDEDNESS.

The conference of the delegation was marked by a spirit of open-mindedness with reference to the accused judge. It was evident from the expressions that the Georgia congressman, individually and collectively, are determined to do even and exact justice to Judge Speer and the public alike. If the charges, as filed by the department of justice, warrant it, there is little doubt that some member of the delegation will at the proper time move the impeachment of Speer, and that most likely he will have the support of his colleagues. If, on the other hand, it appears from the report of the special examiner that the charges are overdrawn, not supported by facts, or that the alleged offenses do not constitute impeachable conduct within the meaning of the constitution and the law, then the delegation as a whole will wash their hands of the affair and the proceedings will follow.

The judiciary committee had intended to proceed with its investigation of the charges next Monday, but in view of today's action by the Georgia delegation it is believed probable that further inquiry by the committee will be postponed

Naughty X-Ray Skirt Barred From Streets Of Los Angeles, Cal.

(By Associated Press.)

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 22.—Official Los Angeles enjoined today the wearing of the so-called X-ray dress on the streets.

Chief of Police Sebastian said if he found present laws inadequate he would recommend the passage of an ordinance specifically forbidding the public appearance of women in diaphanous raiment.

BANKERS OBJECT TO THE CURRENCY BILL

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—The national conference of bankers and members of the currency commission of the American Bankers' association opened here today with a "keynote" address by A. Barton Hepburn, as chairman.

He criticised features of the Owen-Glass currency bill and advocated a central bank with branches instead of regional reserve banks.

George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National bank, of Chicago, who had just returned from Washington, where he conferred with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo with reference to the currency bill, said he might discuss the interview with the delegates.

Among the 200 or more bankers present were Sol Weskin, New Orleans; Joseph A. McCord, Atlanta; Charles Preston, Charleston, S. C.; Thomas P. Denham, Jacksonville; Logan C. Murray, Louisville; S. E. Bogland, Memphis; James W. Little, Mobile; F. Terrell, San Antonio, Tex.; William M. Davant, Savannah, Ga., and delegates representing forty-eight state banking associations and 173 clearing house associations.

More than twenty-two bankers, delegates from clearing house and banking associations, assembled here today to voice their objections to certain sections of the Glass-Owen currency bill now before congress and make suggestions for a law which they hope will bring about an improvement in the banking system of the country.

The conference was called by the currency commission of the American Bankers' association. Its purpose, as explained by Frederick E. Farnsworth, of New York, secretary of the organization, is to aid the administration in "effecting good currency legislation."

Arrangements were made for three sessions today and it is the hope of members of the commission that by tomorrow night recommendations for amendments to Glas-Owen measure will have been agred upon which will make it satisfactory to a great majority of the financiers of the country.

"There are four fundamental features of the bill to which the bankers of the country are almost unanimously opposed," said Mr. Farnsworth. "They are the government financial provision, the reserve feature, the portion referring to note issue by the government and the stipulation for the refunding of the 2 per cent bonds. The ideas of the association bankers on these scores are well known and it is probable that their action will take the form of resolutions protesting against the objectional features and suggesting amendments."

WIRELESS OPERATOR DIED AT DUTY AS SHIP STRUCK

Chief Sent Assistant Away From Board; Was Crushed By Falling Mast

Donald C. Perkins, of Oakland, Cal., who went as chief wireless operator on the State of California, in hope of encountering adventure, was off duty and asleep when the steamer struck an uncharted roof in Gambier bay, Alaska, last Sunday morning. Awakened by the shock he rushed to the wireless room and ordered Walter Chamberlain, the operator on duty, to seek safety.

Then he sat down at the key, but before he could send his first call for help a faling mast went through the wireles house and crushed Perkins to death at his post. Of the three lifeboats launched, the survivors said, one was useless, having been smashed by falling wreckage and one was carried down by the suction of the ship.

The survivors told of the death of Mrs. H. C. Riordan, of Chicago, 84 years old, and her daughter, Miss Estella Riordan.

R. E. Baker, a water tender, who rushed back as the cabins filled, found boat No. 4 with a few persons in it, among them Mrs. Riordan.

"The water was just up to the boat, but in the excitement it had not been loosened from the fastenings," he said. "I cut it loose and as the steamer sank it floated but the after-draft sucked i tdown. I caught a piece of wreckage."

GIRL IN SUICIDE PACT DIES AS SHE PRAYED

With Entreaties That She Might Join Dead Sweetheart, She Passes Away

(By Associated Press.)

YONKERS, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Ruth Hamilton died today in answer to her prayers. Brief periods of lucidness during the night were spent by the seventeen-year-old Boston girl in praying that she might join her boy lover, Charles Rich, who shot and killed himself after mortally wounding her Wednesday night. They had been sweethearts a few months and had agreed to die together.

"Oh, why don't I die; why didn't he shoot me right? I want to be buried with him," she moaned continually, unheeding the tears of her mother and sister at her bedside.

The motive for the death pact was the girl's worry over heart disease and a recent injury which Rich sustained, making both discouraged at the future.

Aviator Stops Engine Two Miles Above Earth And Plunges to Safety

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Officers of the army signal corps today are discussing the 2,000-foot "slide" of the aviator, C. Murvin Wood, who stopped his engine nearly two miles above the earth late yesterday and plunged down through the gathering dusk to a successful landing on the parade ground at Fort Myer, Va. His spectacular downward dash occupied only four minutes.

The officers were preparing to have beacon fires lighted to guide the aviator back to his landing place when Wood began his spectacular slide. He had been aloft one hour and forty-five minutes and had sailed far out into Maryland before he decided to come down.

Father and Daughter United After 53 Years

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Mrs. Miller French, of Clatskanie, Ore., left here today with her aged father, from whom she has been separated for fifty-three years, believing him dead. The discovery that he was still alive came about recently when Mrs. French attempted to secure a pension as the daughter of a supposedly deceased veteran of the civil war.

Her father, Louis E. Hunt, had parted from his wife when he enlisted at Buffalo in '61, when his daughter was only two years old. It was reported later that he had been killed in the war, but he returned in '65, to the amazement of his friends, who told him his wife had believed him dead and had married another man.

Like Enoch Arden, he turned his back on Buffalo, leaving his wife in ignorance. He did not dare even to communicate with his child. Recently, without knowing whether his daughter was still alive, he learned through the pension bureau that she was applying for a pension on the supposition that he was dead. The reunion followed, and Captain Hunt, who is now eighty-four years old and feeble, will make his home for the rest of his life with his daughter in Oregon.

GREENVILLE CRIMINAL COURT HAS BIG DOCKET

More Than 100 Cases to Be Tried—County Wants Many Improvements

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

GREENVILLE, S. C., Aug. 22.—Fifty-five prisoners in the county are awaiting trial at the term of criminal court which convenes week after next, with Judge Rice presiding. In addition to those in the prison there are many out on bail, bringing the number close to 100.

The patrolmen claim the reward of $50 offered by the state authorities for the capture of Bud Easley, who escaped from the county farm some time ago. Easley was found in Greenville by the officers yesterday and will be taken back to Columbia today. He is serving a life sentence from Spartanburg for murder.

According to a decision by the county legislative delegation there will be no election this year for a new court house.

The city board of health has prepared a memorial to the legislative delegation asking for the establishment of a county board of health in Greenville county. Such a board would greatly aid the authorities in enforcing sanitary measures in the suburbs, it is believed.

ATLANAT ROTARY CLUBS WANTS 1914 MEETING

Delegates Put Up Such Warm Fight That Question Is Submitted to Vote

(By Associated Press.)

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Atlanta delegates to the annual convention here of the International Association of Rotary clubs made such a determined fight for the 1914 sessions that the executive committee decided to poll two months hence a referendum vote finally to decide the next meeting place.

Houston, Tex., Cincinnati, Winnipeg, St. Paul and Richmond also want the next convention. Russell F. Greiner, of Kansas City, was elected president on the second ballot.

HOT FIGHT ON FOR MACON MAYORALTY

With Three Candidates in Field, Municipal Politics Are Lively

MACON, Ga., Aug. 22.—Municipal politics is arousing interest daily, since Bridges Smith has announced for mayor, together with his mayoralty ticket, and Wallace Miller, has entered the race and announced his aldermanic ticket. Both candidates for mayor have opened campaign headquarters on Cherry street at the most conspicuous places possible, and are ready for the hot fight that is expected.

A great deal of interest yet centers about the aldermanic ticket of A. L. Dasher, Sr., who has announced for mayor but has not yet announced his board of aldermen. It is being reported that he has selected no ticket as was first mentioned, but would offer for mayor without a ticket, accepting the aldermen elected from the two lists already announced. The report, however, is discredited by friends of Dasher, who say that he has a strong board of aldermen selected to run with him for mayor.

The Smith aldermanic ticket is composed of six former aldermen. The ticket is as follows: T. O. Chesney, J. R. Bowden, A. E. Adamson, Lee M. Happ, R. K. Hines and R. S. Thorpe, as old aldermen and F. M. Jones, W. J. Garraughty, John W. Ramsey, Jesse W. Bates, R. C. Hazelhurst and H. T. Willis as new members of the ticket.

The Miller ticket contains the names of some former aldermen who served as alderman during the first tem of Mayor Moore and also under the administration of Judge A. L. Miller, father of Wallace Miller. The list is as follows: P. L. Hay, H. A. Kennington, Charles Schaefer, W. G. Lee, H. W. Pittman, Steve M. Wright, W. R. Evans, E. F. Marritt, W. O. Stevens, J. B. Riley, Eden Taylor, Jr., and F. Joe Bishop.

BUTCHERS IN DUEL TO DEATH IN CROWDED SHOP

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 22.—While the sales room in one of the largest retail meat markets here was crowded with customers today, Frank Mooney and Mark Hamilton, meat cutters, engaged in a death struggle across a meat block until Mooney fell dead on the floor with the long blade of a butcher knife thrust through his heart. Women screamed and fled from the store.

SAYS AMERICAN WOMEN PROTEST CANAL FORTS

Mrs. Sewall Tells Hague That Panama Canal Should Be Free to the World

THE HAGUE, Aug. 22.—"Two million women in America protest against the fortification of the Panama canal," was the assertion made today before the peace congress by Mrs. May Wright Sewall, of Indianapolis.

She drew a round of applause from the delegates as she added: "The canal ought to be free for the whole world and should be adorned with statues of peace at its entrances."

A resolution "inviting the United States government never to fortify the waterway," was laid on the table. Another resolution opposing the construction of military airships was adopted.

FARMERS PLOWING AS HEAT WAVE IS BROKEN

Drought Ends in West When Temperature Drops—Corn Crop Is Ruined

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 22.—After nearly a month of high temperatures that broiled Kansas and parts of Missouri and Oklahoma and broke all records for intensity and duration, the heat wave throughout the three states was broken today. According to reports to the United States weather bureau, a drop of 10 to 20 degrees in temperature that daily has ranged above the 100 mark followed heavy rains over wide sections. Further precipitation was forecasted.

The lowest temperature in two months was recorded at Joplin, Mo., when the mercury registered 68 degrees upon the heels of a hail and rainstorm driven before a cold north wind. Wichita, Kas., reported a fall of 8 degrees, with clouds, showers and cool winds relieving east central Kansas. Hutchinson, Kas., was in a drizzle of rain that covered a wide territory, slowly soaking a thirsty soil.

General reports showed drouth ravages apparently at an end with farmers who had lost their corn preparing for fall plowing for wheat sowing.

ARMORED SHIP RAMS AND SINKS GUNBOAT

Swedish Fleet Runs Into Disaster Off Malmo Friday Morning

(By Associated Press.)

MALMO, Sweden, Aug. 22.—While maneuvers of the British fleet were in progress off Malmo early today an armored ship collided with and sank a gunboat. No details of the disaster have been received.

Clean Clothes Are Scarce in Lindale

ROME, Ga., Aug. 22.—There is a scarcity of clean clothes in Lindale, a cotton mill suburb of Rome, this week on account of an epidemic of petty thefts that sems to have broken out in that section. Mrs. Ben Pike, Misses Jessie and Eva Baugh and others report that baskets of laundry have been stolen from their residences. Presumably the work was that of early morning sneak thieves.

Booklovers' Bulletin

The checking of answers in our Booklovers' Campaign will be completed about September 1. After that is done, we will arrange all those in the prize winning class numerically, showing just what prizes they are entitled to. And then will call in the judges, who will go over our work carefully and when they satisfy themselves that everything is correct, will sign a certificate to that effect and the correct list of prize winners will be published.

We will make a special effort to complete this work so that we can publish the correct list of prize winners the second week in September. The contestants who have stepped into Campaign headquarters to see how the checking is done, know that it is a slow, tedious task, and we hope the others will realize that it takes time to check the thousands of sets of answers that we received in the campaign. When the last picture is published, we will publish the complete list of titles so that any of our readers who missed any of them can secure the complete list and keep it for future reference.

The titles for pictures 42 and 43 were placed under the wrong pictures a few days ago, but that will not make any difference in the checking of answers on these two pictures, as some of the contestants seem to think, and the titles are: No. 42—High Noon, No. 43—The Man in the Street.

RAWLINGS SEEKS PARDON FOR HIS DYING BROTHER

Youngest of Brothers in Famous Murder Case Says Milton Can't Live in Gang

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 22.—Jesse Rawlings, one of the three brothers who were sentenced to life imprisonment for killing the two Carter children seven years ago, was in Valdosta this week for the first time since he started to serve his sentence. He was pardoned by Governor Hoke Smith two years ago and he came here this week to try and get help in securing a pardon for his older brother, Milton, who is still on the chain gang.

Jesse was the youngest of the three boys and was sentenced to hang with Milton. Leonard, the third boy, who was sent up for life, has also been pardoned. Governor Terrell commuted the sentence of both Jesse and Milton to life imprisonment.

Jesse says that Milton is in bad health, having had an attack of appendicitis, and he does not think he can live long on the chain gang.

MAN AND WOMAN DIE IN A SUICIDE PACT

Prepare Poison Dose in Glasses and Die in Each Other's Arms

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 22.—Fearing discovery of their clandestine love by the woman's husband, after two weeks of secret meetings, Mrs. Hazel Stewart, twenty-eight, and Leroy Gross, twenty-two, divided six ounces of poison between them and then lay down to die in one another's arms in Gross' room at the home of Earl Pritchard at midnight last night.

Fumes of the acid awakened Pritchard and he forced an entrance to the room, where he found Gross already dead and Mrs. Stewart unconscious. She was rushed to the city hospital, where she died two hours later, then unidentified, and the mystery of the suicide pact was not unravelled until late this morning.

Gross came here from Franklin, Ind., four years ago, but he did not meet Mrs. Stewart until two weeks ago. Her husband, James Stewart, knew nothing even of the acquaintanceship of the pair.

Mrs. Stewart was a beautiful young woman and had had a happy married life, it was said by her mother and friends. She was away from her home for a short visit, supposedly among friends until a few days ago, and it is now supposed she took this means of being with Gross for a week.

GEORGIA MAN PASSES EXAM AS LIEUTENANT

G. W. Hamilton, of Dalton, Will Be Officer in U. S. Marine Corps

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Secretary Daniels announced today the names of the seventeen men who stood highest in examination for second lieutenants in the United States marine corps. Sixteen vacancies are to be filled, but as two men tied for sixteenth place, it placed seventeen men on the eligible list. The secretary said he would decide later who of the two who tied will be appointed. Sixty-five took the examination. Only one enlisted man, J. C. Foster, of Carlisle, Pa., took the examination. He stood second.

Those who passed in the order of their standing are: H. L. Larsen, Denver, Colo.; J. C. Foster, Carlisle, Pa.; W. H. Rupertus, Washington, D. C.; J. L. Underhill, San Francisco, Cal.; L. E. Fagan, Germantown, Pa.; K. H. Rockey, Philadelphia; B. C. Murchison, Charleston, S. C.; E. T. Lloyd, Washington, D. C.; Alphonse deCarr, St. Louis, Mo.; A. H. Turnage, Farmville, N. C.; G. W. Hamilton, Dalton, Ga.; L. M. Bourne, Jr., Asheville, N. C.; G. L. Lewis, Newark, N. J.; David H. Miller, Merchantsville, N. J.; H. N. Hinchman, Des Moines, Ia.; C. S. Baker, Oakland, Cal., and J. F. S. Norris, Berkeley, Cal.

SLEW BROTHER-IN-IAW; BROTHER'S SENTENCED

Henry and Ellis Mixon to Ask New Trial—Condemned to Twenty Years

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
HARTWELL, Ga., Aug. 22.—Hart adjourned term of the superior court is now in session. Henry and Ellis Mixson, brothers, were tried for murder. Last August they shot and killed John Heaton, their brother-in-law, and in their trial they contended that they had to kill Heaton in their own defense.

The jury returned a verdict of voluntary manslaughter and they were sentenced to twenty years in the chaingang.

The state was represented by Sol Brown, Judge L. N. Worley, of Elberton, and A. A. McCurry, and the defense by James H. and Park Staton, A. G. and Julian McCurry and A. S. and J. Rod Skelton.

Motion for a new trial wil be filed.

MACON LOSES MEETING OF BARACAS-PHILATHEAS

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
MACON, Ga., Aug. 22.—Information has been received from the field secretary of the National Association of Baracas and Philatheas, stating that Macon lost the 1914 annual national convention, held in June, Macon had the largest delegation present and worked faithfully for the next convention.

It is reported that Texas was selected because a national convention had never been held in that section. At the 1914 convention Macon will likely send another body of delegates to Texas and make a fight to land the 1915 convention for this city.

NAVY RAITNING SCHOOL COURSE OF FOUR MONTHS

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Secretary Daniels today ordered that, beginning October 1, enlisted men in the navy may be required to remain in the training schools at the discretion of the commandant, four months instead of three; and in some cases they have to stay as long as six months. Such schools are located at Chicago, San Francisco, Newport and Norfolk.

HUSBAND KILLS WIFE AS SHE PLEADS ON KNEES

Chases Her Three Blocks and Fires Two Shots, Then Escapes

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 22.—While on her knees pleading pitifully for her life, Mrs. Ethel Denson, of Key West, was shot to death on the street here last night by her husband, Benny Denson. Two negroes were eye-witnesses to the tragedy, but were afraid to interfere.

Denson, who followed his wife from Key West here several weeks ago, discovered her working in a restaurant on Franklin street. He threatened to kill her if she did not return with him.

When Mrs. Denson started home her husband was waiting just outside the door, and started after her. She outran him three blocks, but fell on her knees exhausted. Denson rushed up and without a word fired two shots, either of which would have been fatal, physicians say.

Denson has not been captured.

ELECTRICAL IMPROVEMENT FOR BIG COLUMBUS MILL

COLUMBUS, Ga., Aug. 22.—The Eagle and Phoenix mills are being equipped throughout with electrical devices in order to be enabled to continue in operation during high water, which closes down the plant several times a year. Ordinarily the plants of the mills are operated by water power.

Three immense transformers reached the city late Thursday and they are being installed in the mills today. Another carload is on the road. These transformers are 333 kilowatts each, or about 1,250 horse-power in all, and it is stated that the three additional will be 1,850 horsepower, making a total of over 3,000. It is announced by the secretary of the mills that it will require several months to get the new equipment installed and the mills in shape to run by electricity during emergencies.

Baptist Conference

ROME, Ga., Aug. 22.—A conference of the membership of the First Baptist church has been called for next Sunday, August 24. It is understood that the purpose of the conference is to extend a call for a pastor to succeed the late Rev. Dr. R. B. Headden.

JOBS UNDER UNCLE SAM GOING BEGGING

Civil Service Commission Calls on Citizens to Take Examinations for Places

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Jobs under the government are going begging and the civil commission today issued announcements upon examinations to be held for a number of positions, almost every announcement bearing this significant statement in blackfaced letters: "As the commission has experienced considerable trouble in securing a sufficient number of eligibles for this position, qualified persons are urged to enter this examination."

Among the positions which the commission seeks to fill through competitive examinations is that of preparator in the bureau of entomology of the department of agriculture. The position, according to the announcement, will pay the successful candidate $60 a month. The examination consists only of passing in spelling, arithmetic, letter writing, penmanship, copying and demonstrating general aptitude for the job through "practical tests in preparing, mounting and labeling entomogical specimens, both pinned and microscope."

Another place the commission thus far has failed to fill and for which an appeal is made is that of teacher of metal working and mechanical drawing in the Indian service. The job also will pay $60 a month. In addition to being both an arithmetician and an artist, the applicant, according to the specifications, might well have "a knowledge of wood turning."

However, the commission adds this knowledge "is desirable but not essential."

The real prize position open to that citizen of the United States who can qualify and demonstrate his superiority over his fellows pays $4,500 a year. It is the position of professor of pharmacology in the public health service.

"The specific position mentioned," says the commission's announcement, "is one of much responsibility and it is desired to secure the services of a man who has had broad training and extensive, practical experience in various branches of pharmacology, physiological and pharmaceutical chemistry, chemotherapy, etc., as they relate to medicine and the public health."

Those seeking to pluck this plum, however, the commission insists must have had ten years experience along the lines laid down and likewise must have had training that would qualify them for the degree of Ph. D., if they haven't already acquired that distinction.

ACIDITY OF CORN WILL DETERMINE GRADING

Grain Standardization Offices Announces Mode of Determining Various Grades

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—In connection with the announcement by the department of agriculture of the tentative adoption of seven definite grades for commercial corn, the bureau of plant industry's standardization office declares that its investigation in formulating these grades have shown that the "degree of acidity" is a most important factor in determining the soundness of corn, and likewise its safety for storage and for shipment.

While these investigations indicate that acidity tests affords a means of accurately measuring the quality or degree of soundness, it has not been included in the grade requirements, because neither the grain inspection departments nor boards of appeal are familiar with or equipped for making such determination next week in commercial grading.

The results likewise indicate that sound corn of good quality does not exceed 22 cubic centimeters in acidity; that corn with an acidity in excess of 26 cubic centimeters already has undergone partial deterioration and is unsafe for storage; while corn showing an acidity of 3 cubic centimeters or over is distinctly of inferior quality, such as would in almost every instance be classed as sample grade under the present system of grading.

The degree of acidity as herein expressed, represents the number of cubic centimeters of tenth normal alkali solution required to neutralize the acid in 100 grams of corn.

PRUSSIAN AVIATOR PLUNGES TO DEATH

(By Associated Press.)
HALBERSTADT, Prussia, Aug. 22.—Lieutenant Schmidt, of the army aviation corps, met death here today after a fall of more than a mile. The lieutenant was completing an aeroplane flight from Goslar, thirty miles west of Halberstadt, and had begun a spiral descent when one of the wings collapsed and the machine plunged to the ground.

Maybe They Would Erect a Monument To a Slit Skirt

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Intended as a harbinger of woman's political emancipation, Senator Jones, of Washington state, has offered a bill setting aside a space in the proposed plaza between the capitol and the Union station solely for the raising of statues and memorials to women. He would have it known as the "parthenon."

"I suppose they'll be erecting statues to the inventor of the bloomers and latter day slitskirt," sneered an anti-suffragist house member. "It will be a pretty sight—a lot of female statuary all in a clump. Those who don't mistake it for a marble reproduction of a fashionable young ladies' seminary out for a walk will think its a female burying ground."

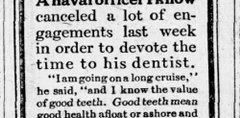
Senator Jones is earnest in his proposal, however, and he has the support of other members of congress who come from suffragist states. Any way the bill has been introduced.

SHOT THROUGH HEART AS HE STOOPS TO KISS BABY

Prominent Chattanooga Man Accidentally Killed in Bidding Child Goodby

(By Associated Press.)
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 22.—Wells Boyd, member of a prominent family, was accidentally shot and killed here this morning in a peculiar yet tragically sad manner. He was preparing to leave his home for his office, and as he leaned down to kiss his baby good-by a pistol which he carried in a holster fell to the floor and was discharged, the bullet passing through his heart, producing instant death.

Mr. Boyd was a son of Dr. A. W. Boyd and local agent for a motorcycle company. He was an amateur motorcycle racer and prominent in business circles.



A naval officer I know canceled a lot of engagements last week in order to devote the time to his dentist.

"I am going on a long cruise," he said, "and I know the value of good teeth. Good teeth mean good health afloat or ashore and a man can't do his work well unless he has good health."

In the army and navy, and in all great industrial spheres the value of good teeth is being recognized. Statistics prove that sound, clean teeth, preserve health and promote business efficiency.

The twice-a-year visit to the dentist and the twice-a-day use of Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream, the efficient, deliciously flavored dentifrice, insure sound clean teeth, better health and better looks.

into any man's mind when such a crime is committed? There is no crime worse than this. There is no punishment too severe for the man who did it. Here is a young woman with her life before her—a young woman not wealthy, perhaps, nor learned; but with that boundless thing that comes from youth. No punishment could pay adequately for that crime.

"Let us look now upon things as they are. When some great crime has been committed, it is human nature to punish for it. When an Indian was killed, was his friend wanted then a victim. It didn't mater who, he wanted a victim—an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.

"But thank God the day of the Indian has passed! In this bright day of this glorious age we seek the guilty. I charge this jury in a cool, sagacious jury. And they will not undertake, like the primeval man, to send to death a victim unless that man be proven guilty. Let's reverse this proposition. Who would be the man likely to commit the crime? Looks first to the surroundings from which such a crime should come. We go to a hen roost where devastation has been committed, and if the hen's neck is mangled we say 'a mink did that.'

ABOUT PENCIL FACTORY.

"Mr. Arnold Hooper impressed that, so he said: 'Look at the history and surroundings of this pencil factory. It is just the place you would like for such a crime as this.' Is he right? Look for yourselves, gentlemen. This pencil factory has been there since 1903. It has employed hundreds of men and women. The average employment is about 200. They may not all be honest; they may not all be good. I don't suppose they were. You find good women and you find women not so good, in all strata of life. Has this factory been a hotbed of pollution and vice? With my friend Dorsey excited almost beyond endurance, straining every effort to blacken it, what crime has said one word against this factory?

"In all of those five years of the pencil factory's history, what have they found with their microscopic examination? What man or woman have they found to say a word against the moral atmosphere of the factory?

"Conley? Yes, I'll come to him later.

"Dalton? I'll speak of him now.

"Did you take a look at him when he went on the stand? God Almighty, when He writes on a human's face, doesn't always write beautifully, but he never fails to write legibly. If you were to meet Dalton in the dark wouldn't you instinctively put your hand on your pocketbook? When God Almighty writes 'thief' on a face, there's no mistaking it.

"DALTON A THIEF."

"When Dalton stepped upon the stand, before he had said a word, my friend Arnold leaned over to me and whispered, 'There's a thief if I ever saw one.'

"Did you see the look on Rube Dim? Did you see me asking if he ever had been away from home for any length of time? Did you see me try to slip up behind him, and did you see him dodge me and get away every time? When he left the stand, I said to Rube, 'That fellow's been in the chain gang as sure as God rules the earth!'

"Did he steal once in the first flush of irresponsible boyhood? Yes, he stole then, but he didn't stop there. He stole when he was a man. He moved into another county and he kept on stealing. Taking him as proper estimate of the amount to the uncaught, there's no telling how many times he has stolen.

"I believe in the divine power of regeneration as applied to every sort of a sinner except a thief and a prostitute. In all my experience I have never yet seen a reformed thief or a reformed woman who had fallen.

"The Master recognized that truth. Do you remember when He was on the cross and He had a thief on each side of him? One of them railed at Him, but the other one spoke gently. And to the one who spoke gently He said, 'This day shalt thou be with Me in paradise.' The Master didn't give him until tomorrow, because He knew if He did that thief would be stealing again in Jerusalem before the sun went down. He said, 'This day shalt thou be with Me.' He didn't take any chances on that thief.

HAS DALTON REFORMED?

"Has Dalton reformed? He's done the dirty thieving trick that a thief always does when he wants to make people believe he's reformed. He's gone to a congregation of honest Godly people and joined them. When a man dies in two counties, and wants to get away from the odor of his misdeeds, he generally joins the church.

"What did this thief do when Mr. Dorsey asked him if he had ever been to that factory basement for immoral purposes? He could have declined to answer. He could have hung his head. Did he do that? No, he grinned. He was as proud as a boy with a new red top. It was the first time in his whole obscure thieving career that he ever had been in the limelight. It was the first time he ever had talked to honest men and had their attention, much less their respect.

DALTON'S BRAZEN REPLIES.

"And what sort of a woman was it in Frank's office? I asked Dalton. His brazen answer showed his kind. 'I had a peach myself and I paid no attention to anybody else.' And his peach was—Daisy Hopkins! I have no fault for Daisy. I'm sorry for her. If she so forgot herself as to allow a state of intimacy to exist between herself and that dirty brute, Dalton, God pity her!

"Men may say to her as our Lord said to Mary: 'By way of atonement, go sin no more.'

"And she was a peach, said Dalton, —and I had my eyes on her alone.' But gentlemen remember that Conley says that Dalton didn't have that peach—that lemon! Conley said that Dalton had another woman who lived between Hunter and Hayden streets.

"Now comes the crowning infamy of the whole thing. I am not saying that men are wholly bad because they fall before the siren call of passion. But gentlemen, no decent white man ever bragged on the streets about the way he had. Why, even the animals go away from the sight of others. It requires decency and cleanliness, and good surroundings, for gentlemen to fall. Burns says, 'Deal gently with men, and more gently with women, for to step aside is human.'

"The difference between hyenas and other beasts is that they fall with brutality, and a gentleman falls under decent surroundings and under real temptation.

"Dalton, like a gopher, went down the scuttle hole—the gopher hole! My friend Hooper comes from south Georgia, and uses 'em for chasing. And he knows a gopher usually has a rattlesnake in his hole. And so Dalton went down that dirty hole into the basement, and then went further into the inner sanctum of filth, which didn't even belong to the gentlemen who ran the factory. He went into the dark, dirty, filthy, slimy, oozy goods box, which was covered with a sack which if put to the nose of a skunk would be offensive. And he took her, this peach, down there, where a dog wouldn't step aside—a place where a cat would never encouch; where no decent human being would draw his breath. No wonder it made his passion. That, gentlemen, is Dalton.

ATTACKS DORSEY'S PARTISANSHIP.

"I am partisan, gentlemen, and I admit it. And the solicitor says that he is not. God knows, gentlemen, I've never heard such partisanship in any court before. I never heard a solicitor general, sworn to enforce the laws impartially, say: 'I'll go as far as the court will let me.' 'I'll go as far as the court will let me,' he said when checked by the court. How far did he go, out of court? Nobody but God ever will know. And if the length the solicitor general, that high official, has gone can be measured only by the infinite, to what length do you suppose these detectives went?

SERPENT'S TRAIL.

"There is only one other man besides Dalton, who said that he, Dalton, had been to the factory with a woman. And he said that Dalton went into the factory with a woman between 1 and 2 o'clock—when Frank always was at lunch. This man, and I have no reason to believe he was not telling the truth, says that he only saw Dalton enter the front door, and does not know where he went inside the building. Then was at a time when the same entrance was used by the Clark Woodenware company and by the pencil factory. But, gentlemen, I am prepared to admit that, even left an oozy trail, the trail of a serpent, whether he went to the factory or to the woodenware company.

"Now, gentlemen, is there anything else except the incidents where Frank was connected—and I'm coming to that later—against the factory? Is there anything indecent, anything that would make it different from other factories? Think of a factory that had on it the keen eyes of Starnes, who stops at nothing; the watchful eyes of Black, whom I love and whom I want to put my arms around every time I see him; and the eagle eyes of Pat Campbell, who didn't dare to go on the stand for fear I'd ask him how he got those statements from Conley; and the eyes of Scott, who was one of that lovely quartet. Is there a factory in Georgia that could stand the searching probe which they gave this one?

BEAVERS' NEW DECALOGUE.

"Let us see. In the first place, we've had a mighty upheaval in Atlanta in the last year or two. My friend Beavers has written a new decalogue, and he has searched the town with a fine tooth comb, hunting for wrongdoers. He has put on a vice squad—I was near saying an immoral suad, but I won't. A vice squad has been searching the city for every house on the head of the body politic. Had this factory been polluted, would it have escaped?

"Would Schiff, over there, or Darley, or any one of a hundred others, be at large today, if they had been running a disorderly house in that factory? One of the coolest thing that my friend Hooper said —and he doesn't want to be cruel, he is so mild that he can't do much harm—was that the evidence showed that Schiff and Darley were immoral. There's not a thing to show guilt or misconduct on the part of that man Schiff—not a line of evidence.

"You saw him on the stand the other day, and you will concede that if the brother over there does top him in morals he does not in brains. Who says a word against this 22-year-old lad? Or against Wade Campbell? But at the same time they are attacking them, they take this dirty Burtie Dalton to their breast and embrace him like a 16-year-old. Unfortunately I never belonged to a class that worked with its hands. I have worked with my head —not effectively, maybe, but persistently.

"I come from a line of people who worked with their hands. I am a common American citizen, and I know the working classes because my ancestors were of it. Among my breed there were no prudish women nor dudish men. I belong to ancestors who in Europe walked 500 miles to escape persecution. And I want to say, gentlemen, that those 500 girls would not have stayed eight years in that factory if it had been a disorderly house.

DEFENDS WORKING WOMEN.

"It wasn't true, gentlemen, because it is prosperous and it has had a long prosperous career. I assert that the working women of Georgia stand higher than that. But if there was this pollution, if it be true and I am mistaken, if there were 100 polluted females or 100 weak-minded men, the factory would have gone to pieces in forty-eight hours. Let the head of any factory, anywhere, practice criminal intimacy with employes, and the industry will be wrecked on the rocks of bankruptcy.

"Let us look at what sort of a man we've got to deal with.

FRANK TOLD THE TRUTH.

"I don't have to argue that he's a man of brains, do I? You heard his statement. I don't have to assert that it was true. You got perfect confidence that it was not mine. I haven't got sense enough to have made it. I sat and heard it and wondered at that wonderful system of questions that would fool anybody, one that would fool the secretary of the treasury; you can drop it and it won't have the ring. If my brother Arnold had made that statement it might have had the appearance or the weight of the genuine, but it wouldn't have had the ring. That story had the tone that comes from old Nature's breast when it's true.

"Is this an idiot? You all know the old saying, gentlemen, that an idle brain is the devil's workshop. And so it is. There is nothing truer than that. Nobody knows it better than I do. As long as I keep hard at work I'm a fairly decent man, but as long as I labor I behave myself fairly well. I go home at night and I sleep maybe not the sleep of innocence, but maybe of fairly well. But I give me a couple of days off and then it is different. An idle brain is the devil's workshop.

IDLENESS SHOULD BE PUNISHED.

"The idle men are the ones you must watch. Who are the thieves of this community? The working men? Not so. Even Starnes and Black have found that out. Even Rosser, who is kin to me —and that's the only thing. I've got against him, except that he's a detective—even Rosser found that out.

"An old New York bank president retired after a long and successful career. They gave him a banquet, and they asked him to tell what it was that he had noticed most in men with regard to human character. He said that was easy to answer. He said that nearly every one of the young men in the bank, at one time or another had been under suspicion. But he never knew one to get into real trouble who had been industrious.

"Maybe there are such things as Dr. Jekyls and Mr. Hydes. My friend Hooper may know more about that sort than I do. But do you judge men by the exceptions? No, you judge them by the mighty rule. You don't spyglass the eddies to judge the size of a river. I submit this man's character in issue. Now don't be deceived by that. If we hadn't done it, the law would have compelled us to have that man's character was good. We could have stood on that rule of law. But we didn't wish to. You are entitled to know what manner of man he is. And we've given it to you.

FRANK'S CHARACTER.

"I assert that not a soul in the sound of my voice could have shown a better character than this man has shown by the credible testimony.

"I'm not talking about the story of that dirty, thieving Conley—a story that no decent man could swallow without vomiting.

"Oh, yes,' they say, 'but some of the girls swore against Frank's character.' I'll come to that. And I'm not going to try to fool you, either. In the first place I couldn't if I tried, and that's reason enough.

"You all know that you can get people to swear against most any man. If I was the defendant, and my friend Reb had so far forgot himself as to put my character in issue, I've no doubt that you could find a number of men who would swear that I was vicious. But I don't think I am extraordinarily so. I've no doubt that in my long career as a lawyer I have here and there lambasted a rascal and dealt unjustly with an honest man, and that they would have a feeling themselves aggrieved, to come up here and swear against my character.

"These girls who work with this man day after day and year after year have told you that his character is good. Some others, maybe they were envious, maybe suspicious, maybe they felt themselves aggrieved, swore that his character is bad—because they thought they were swearing the truth.

"Do you doubt that you could even find some of your own sister against the character of his honor, the judge in this case? He's an honest man and a true man, as we all know. But he has had to come in contact with the prejudices of people. He has had to deal severely sometimes. But would you believe those who feeling themselves aggrieved, might swear against him? Or would you believe those who had seen him in sunshine and in shadow, who had seen him under stress, and came here and swore that his character is good?

ATMOSPHERE OF PREJUDICE.

"Now, what about Frank's character? Here are these young ladies who swore against him. And I have not a word to say against them. Miss Cato was there three and a half years. She stayed there until after this murder. Do you think, if she had believed in her heart that his character is bad, that she would have stayed there? Why, gentlemen, you know that she would have fled from him as from a pestilence. An, gentlemen, she has heard these wild stories since the murder. She was looking at him through the dense heated unreal atmosphere of prejudice. Then Miss Maggie Griffin, who was there two months—what did she know of his character as compared with those who were there three years? Then Miss Dunnegan, who was there two or three weeks two and a half years ago. Miss Johnson was there two months in 1910. Miss Nellie Potts was never there and never saw Frank in her life." Mr. Rosser mentioned the others by name, showing that they had been in the factory from three days to a week.

"You heard that the bishop of Georgia (I believe they call him the bishop of Atlanta now) was so unfortunate as to have his character put in issue, I could find more men who would differ with his character than the number of girls they have found to swear against this defendant.

"THIS IS THEIR CATCH.

"This horde of police, this spyglass squad of detectives—Campbell, Starnes, Black—have seined every pond, have spyglassed every corner; and this is their catch! Generaled by that mighty detective, Lanford; advised by my astute friend, Dorsey, this is all they have found. Well, you ought to be proud of it, gentlemen," turning to face some of the detectives at the state's table. "And how much of the Minola McKnight methods they have used, no one knows but God in His infinite wisdom.

"Hundreds of men worked at that factory. They are the stronger vessels, to say the least. They are better able to cope with the kindness and the tenderness of such gentlemen as Black and Starnes and Campbell. Is it possible that if Frank be such a monster there was not one man at the factory who was honest enough and brave enough to come up here and tell you about it? Is it possible that not one man worked there who had sense enough to discover it? They had Gantt here—that long-legged fellow who was the cause of all this trouble, according to my friend Hooper.

"I'm not going to say anything harsh about Gantt, but you all know why he was discharged. Under the circumstances of his discharge, had Frank been a monster and a pervert, who would have been better to come here and proclaim it than Gantt? Gantt was on the stand twice. And he never said a word against this man's character.

BACK TO CONLEY'S STORY.

"Now I have dealt with conditions and with his character. Let us see if there is anything except Conley's story that points the finger of suspicion toward Frank; any circumstances that is not suspicious only because it has been twisted and turned and hammered by prejudice? If they have any other suspicions against this man which they have not brought out, any friend intimates, then they have done you a great wrong, for you want to know all of the facts.

"One of their suspicions is that he had been preparing to get in contact with this little girl. Let's see about that. Miss Robertson said that on the fourth floor several months ago she saw Frank teaching this little girl something about her work; and Dorsey insinuated that he did something wrong while he was teaching her; but Miss Robertson did not. And he showed only that Frank called her 'Mary.' If you had overheard a conversation months ago could you not hear Arnold call—led me Luther or called me Rosser? But with it all, gentlemen, she testified that there were 30 or 40 girls on the fourth floor at the time.

SORRY FOR TURNER.

"Next comes a little boy named Turner. And I have nothing to say against him, for I'm sorry for him. Think of the claws with which these detectives dragged his statement out of him. Picture Minola McKnight and then think of him. He testified that he saw Frank talking to Mary, and under the wheedling of Dorsey he said that she backed off from him and he told her he was the superintendent of the factory.

"Does that show a dark plot? Suppose it does. There is one thing that takes the sting out of it all. It was all in broad daylight, and he said that all the other little girls were there. Can you suppose that a man of his intelligence would begin improper conduct toward that little girl with her friends around? She was a gentle, sweet girl; and she would have known by no past experience but by a God-given nature, the first moment that his hand made an improper motion or when he ogled her with his eye. And a girl like her would have fled like a frightened deer and confided in this good man sitting here," pointing to Coleman, "and to her mother, and her days at the factory would have ended then.

"Does anybody make anything out of this circumstance except Dorsey and Starnes here who thinks it right to violate a criminal law to get a false affidavit? And then there is Dewey Hewell's testimony, that she saw him talking to Mary. But she said that Grace Hix was there, and Magnolia Kennedy and Helen Ferguson. Does anybody believe that this boy," pointing to Frank, "no matter what his character, would have mistreated her there in the presence of her companions?

"If you do, you think like Dorsey, and there's no use in me arguing this case. But gentlemen, he couldn't have mistreated her. She would have bounded away like a deer. My friend from the wiregrass would have you believe that that was the beginning, and that then Frank turned off Gantt. Gantt was turned off for what? Everybody knows. I have no doubt that these detectives have whispered in his ear that Frank got rid of him as a part of his plot. But if it was true, don't you know that he would have been the first to denounce Frank as a living monster? And there is another suspicion. I was going to leave Conley out, but I will deal with him just a moment. They say that Frank plotted Friday with Conley. Conley says that Frank told him at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon to come back the next day.

HOW COULD FRANK KNOW?

"How could Frank have known that she was coming to the factory? Placards had been placed about the factory, saying that they were going to pay Friday. And he had every reason to suppose that she would get her money then. It is true that five or six envelopes were left over. But Frank did not know to whom they belonged, according to the undisputed evidence of Schiff.

"Then there is Helen Ferguson, who says that she asked for Mary's pay. And again Miss Magnolia Kennedy, who says that she was with Helen and that Helen did not ask for it. One of these two girls is mistaken. You must decide which. No matter which was mistaken, it was months after the occurrence when they testified; and would anybody consider that a circumstance to bring about a man's death?

"Again, how did he know that she wouldn't come when Lemmie Quinn was there, when Darley was there, or how did he know that she would come at all? It was the custom for people who didn't get their pay on pay day to get it the next working day. How did he know? The charge that he did know is nothing but gangrened suspicion, a cry for blood, a cry of prejudice and of passion. Then here is another suspicion.

"My good friend Black, whom I love, said that Frank was nervous and Conley said that Frank was nervous, and Montag said he was nervous, and so was he (Montag). And so was Mrs. Montag, and so was Isaac Haas. Why didn't they hang old Sig? He was ner-

Dear Sir: I wish to thank you for the many kindnesses shown, and for the great help you have been to me with my boys. We are very much pleased with the improvement Gerald has made, and I am also much pleased to be able to advise you that Henry seems to at last have found himself, for I have a letter from the College he is attending, that he has worked hard this past 3 months, and has not only passed all the studies he is carrying in College, but has also made up all his entrance credits, and goes back there next Fall a full fledged Junior, and eligible for Athletics, and I feel now that he is coming out all right. Richard is again doing fine.

Again Thanking you, and assuring you any help I can be to you in any way, shall be only too glad to do so, and with best regards, I remain, Yours very truly, W. C. HULL.

SKIN TROUBLE BEGAN WITH ITCHING

Could Not Rest Day or Night. Sores Itched So Would Scratch Herself to Pieces. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Two Weeks.

Glenns P. O., Va. — "My baby's trouble began with an itching and then a little bump would come and she could not rest day or night. The trouble affected her whole body. The bumps festered and came to a head and the corruption looked like thick matter, kind of a yellow color. The sores itched so badly until it seemed to me she would scratch herself to pieces and then a sore would form and her clothes would stick to her body and pull off the little scab. In some places she would scratch and irritate the sore until they seemed to be large. She was affected about a year.

"First I employed a medicine which did very little good; next I used ——— and ——— that did harm. So I wrote for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bathed her body in warm water and Cuticura Soap and then I applied the Cuticura Ointment and they afforded relief after twice using. I bought some more Cuticura Soap and Ointment and inside of two weeks she was cured." (signed) Mrs. J. R. Greggs, Nov. 21, 1912.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Ointment have afforded the most economical means for the treatment of skin and scalp that torture, itch, burn, scale, and destroy sleep. Sold everywhere. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Are You Constipated? Take Podolax

No need to tell how constipation saps your energy, makes you sick, takes all the good out of life. At first you think it don't amount to much; before you know it, you're sick sure enough. Nothing tastes good; mouth hot and thick; head aches; everything is wrong. That's the time to go after the liver—and strong—but NOT with dynamite (calomel or violent saline purgatives. Get a bottle of PODOLAX; take a little at bedtime tonight. It's the logical cure for lazy livers, because it stimulates every function of the liver, stomach and bowels to healthy activity; it "cleans house"—but most gently. You'll wake in the morning, refreshed by your good night's rest, smiling and ready for a fresh start. No more constipation, no more headache. There's a smile in every spoonful.

DORSEY WILL CONCLUDE, SUMMING UP CASE AGAINST FRANK

TIME FOR NERVOUSNESS.

"Why didn't they hang Darley, to whom they have intimated improper conduct, although there is not a word of evidence to substantiate it? Is there a soul within the sound of my voice who would not have been nervous if they had seen that little girl, cut off in the beginning of her young life, lying there disfigured—a beautiful flower smeared in the mud, crushed in the cinders? Would it have made you nervous?

"Man is made a little lower than the angels, but since he was first made he has been falling pretty fast. But at that is there a man so careless that the tears wouldn't come to his eyes when he looked at that little child? I'm not chicken-hearted. I could look on one of you hurt pretty badly, and not cry about it.

"I can see a grown man hurt, and I expect him to bear it like a man. But I've never heard the cry of a woman or a child that I didn't become excited and nervous and sorry. God grant that my end out of some when this is not so. Nobody but a man-hunter, yelping and crying on the trail, would hang him because his nerves fluttered when he looked upon that poor child's mutilated body. There was another suspicion.

"He didn't wake up when they first telephoned to him. That depends largely on what he had for supper. Some of us sleep lightly. Some of us sleep soundly, so soundly that we do not often hear the breakfast bell. Would you hang us for that?

"They called three families that morning. Sig Montag didn't hear. His wife did. She had to wake him up. They telephoned to old Uncle Isaac Haas, and his wife had to go and say, 'Ike, the phone's ringing.' Why not hang Sig? Why not hang Uncle Ike? Why not hang them both if we are going to hang men for not answering their telephones?

SIGN OF GOOD CONSCIENCE.

"Gentlemen, when Frank didn't hear the telephone ringing that morning, it was a sign of peace of mind and good conscience.

"But that ain't all the suspicious circumstances. Oh, no. My friend says their hired a lawyer. They hired me too quick. Now, what's the undisputed fact about that? Now I remember the pencil company because I once represented them in a matter. I don't remember Frank. I don't think I ever saw him. Now let's look at the conditions which surrounded his detention. Sunday Frank went to the police station twice and he talked to them frankly and openly. He wasn't suspected then —or at least I don't think so. Of course nobody knows what was in John Black's head. That's the reason I like John. I like him because nobody know's what's in his head. But Monday, gentlemen, Frank wasn't arrested.

"Now on Monday though, they didn't have the same attitude. Monday he went down again."

Judge Roan interrupted the attorney to declare the morning recess of five minutes. After the recess Attorney Rosser resumed.

ONE OF WORST SUSPICIONS.

"One of the worst suspicions against this young man was the employment of a lawyer. Now we'll go into this matter and see what's in it. I told you on Monday they adopted a different plan. They sent two detectives after him. John Black said he'd been watching him. The idea of the police was to show their fangs, to frighten him. But they didn't keep him against his will. Oh, no! John Black said—and John's an honest man—that they didn't.

"When he was on the stand here the other day, and I asked him what he meant by 'releasing' Frank on Monday, he stuttered and snapped two or three times like a turtle and said, 'Just releasing—that's all I meant.' No, they didn't arrest him that day. They just brought him down there and made him sit for an hour and a half while my friend Newport, with his wonted dignity, attended to police business. He was letting him soak. My friend Beavers over there, the handsome one, walked around and let him soak. And Frank sat there and took it all."

Attorney Rosser turned toward the accused. "That's the only weak thing you did in this whole case. It's the only time you were foolish, the only time you didn't show good sense.

NEEDED TWO LAWYERS.

Facing the jury again, Mr. Rosser continued. "He didn't know what he was up against. If he had, he'd have hired two lawyers. He wouldn't be contented with one old one-horse lawyer like me.

"But old Sig had been here a long time. He knew that police crowd. And they're good fellows. I'm not going to say much against them. I'm afraid to. You notice me now, and see how prudent I am. Why, gentlemen, they'd have me arrested before tonight for white slavery or something.

"But Frank didn't have the honor of acquaintance with any of these gentlemen. The state tried to show that he had a large acquaintance among the B'nai B'rith. I guess I pronounced it right. You know what I mean, anyhow. He did. He knew most of the members. He was president, and director of their charities. But that didn't bring him into brotherly relation with the police crowd.

"But Sig Montag knew them, and he called up Herbert Haas and told him to go down there. Now, Haas didn't want to go, and he didn't want to go for one of the best reasons on earth. I'd give $20,000 to be deterred by the same reason. His wife was about to be confined. Sig Montag got into his auto and went to Haas' door and said, 'You've got to go.' He knew that Frank wasn't released.

"I remember an incident in English history that fits in well here. They were talking to hang Sir Thomas Moore. They led him to the scaffold and he started to go up and found that the steps were rickety.

"He turned to his lieutenant and said, 'Assist me up. I'll shift for myself coming down.' This man faced a proposition like Sir Thomas Moore, but he didn't know it. He was under arrest —if you'll let them say so. But he was a citizen sitting there alone, and they wouldn't let his friends or his lawyer see him. And what happened? That young lawyer over there, with his mind divided between Frank and his great domestic climax, went to a telephone and called me up. Dorsey, with his eyes close together over there," like a snake, says 'He hired a lawyer at once.'

SOLICITOR WILL REGRET IT.

"Gentlemen, when the solicitor reaches the place in years that I have, he'll regret it. The things he has done on this trial will never be done again. I'll stake my life on it. But Dorsey says 'he got a lawyer.' And his eyes got as green as the beads on a woman's dress, and he said 'Dirty dog! Idle murderer!'

ANOTHER SUSPICION.

"Yes, there's another thing they say he did that was suspicious. He hired a detective agency that same afternoon. But let's get the situation, gentlemen, under which that was done. He had been to the police and given them a statement. But I had better go back and tell what happened when I got there. I went down there, and no one didn't know anything about my being called. I don't think I was a very welcome visitor. They didn't take my hat when I went in. I don't think they wanted me, and I haven't changed my notion yet.

"I said 'What's the matter, boys?'

"One of the men standing near said 'They've got this man arrested and they suspect him of the crime.'

"Did Black speak up and say 'No, we haven't got him arrested?' Not so. The police don't mind quibbling, and the detectives don't mind telling lies to a man, in an effort to make him tell the truth. One of them said, 'We want this man to make a statement.' I said 'All right, go ahead.' Then Lanford turned to him and said, 'Come on!' just like he was speaking to a yellow dog. I started to follow them, and they said 'We don't want you.' I said, 'Oh, I don't guess you do, but I'm a-going in anyhow. I'm not going to interrupt you. I'm not going to make any suggestions to that man. But I'm going in there.'

"Now, gentlemen, I had a good reason for going in there. I didn't want them to say that he had said something which he didn't say. And why shouldn't I have gone in? Wasn't I as good a citizen as Chief Newport Lanford? Didn't I have the interest of society as much at heart as he did? Wasn't I as likely to want the murderer caught? Was I any more likely to try to cover up a crime?

WHY DIDN'T LANFORD TESTIFY?

"I told him that it was preposterous, that a man to have done this crime would have marks all over him. Then Frank as quick as a flash let Lanford examine him. Why didn't Lanford go on the stand and deny that examination? Was it because he didn't want to get into a little loving conversation with me? Was it because he dreaded Hugh Arnold? Or was it because he was afraid we'd make him tell that dark, disgraceful Conley chapter?

"Then they released him, according to my friend John Black. John's a man who will tell the truth if you pull it out of him. They marched Frank's house and looked over his dirty linen. Then he had that séance which few good citizens I am glad to say, are called upon to suffer.

WANTED MYSTERY SOLVED.

"Did he keep quiet? He would have kept quiet if he'd been a guilty man. But he didn't. He thought of the brutal murder. He thought of the bereaved family. He thought of the shock to society. So he telephoned to Sig Montag and suggested that they get a detective to ferret out the mystery.

"Why?

"Because, according to the police, he wanted a detective to protect himself.

"Why, gentlemen," turning to face the detectives, 'tis that the sort of men you've got in your profession, that you can hire a detective, if you're guilty, to protect you?

ATTACKS SCOTT.

"Well, if that was the reason Frank hired the Pinkertons, he was speedily undeceived. Right there cropped into this case the most remarkable piece of business that I ever heard of. I wish Scott was here because I wanted him to hear this. Scott took down his statement and then told him that he would work hand in hand with the police. Now wasn't that a gallant band of detectives?

"I expect maybe some other decent man will employ Scott, because decent men do mighty funny things sometimes. Mark you, gentlemen, the very day he hired Scott, Scott told him exactly the line he was going to work on. You'll have to give Scott credit for that. Scott told him in substance 'If the police suspect you, I'll suspect you. If the police trail you, I'll trail you. If the police hang you, I'll hang you.'

"When Scott told Frank that, did Frank differ with him as to the price or dismiss him on some other pretext? No. He said 'Go ahead.'

"Now, gentlemen, consider that spectacle. Here was a young Jew, unversed in the ways of the world, raised in the north, unacquainted with our southern ways, practically without acquaintances in the community, except among his own sect, hiring a man to trail the murderer even though the murderer be himself. I say no scene like that has been painted since Abraham left Ur of the Chaldee.

STILL ANOTHER SUSPICION.

"Now is there anything else suspicious against him? Yes, they say he tried to direct suspicion toward Newt Lee. How false, how vilely false! He simply found that when he first looked over the limb slip he failed to notice that there had been skips in it. Darley testified to that. The detectives had dared to try to contradict it. He told you that when he took that time slip out of the clock he wrote the date on it, and that the date had been erased. Then what happened? Our little friend Dorsey had to stand up in his place and admit that he had made the erasure.

"They intimate that he or his friends hid the bloody shirt. Now that's the neatest of all the things they have tried to charge against him. There's not a line of testimony to support it. There's not a fact to indicate it. It was not even suggested by my friend Hooper as a fact.

"He merely advanced it as a supposition—and a pretty weak one at that. Black and some of the others found it in an out-of-the-way place. They brought it to the station house and Newt Lee acknowledged it was his."

At this point Solicitor Dorsey disputed that Lee had acknowledged the shirt, and Mr. Rosser passed the point over.

"Gentlemen, this boy," pointing to Frank, "didn't know where Newt Lee lived. They want you to believe that he went to Newt Lee's house, got that shirt, bloodied it, and hid it in a barrel behind the house. Why, I don't believe anybody in the world with a grain of sense would believe such a ridiculous story. What are we coming to when they are willing to do o thing like that to hang a man?

"There's been some wrong things in this case, and one of them is the effort of the police, in which the newspapers also have had their share, to picture this trial as a conflict between the lawyers. God grant that we will never fall so low as to have an intellectual combat with this poor boy as the stake.

TURNS SUSPICION ON LEE.

"This shirt is one thing I've never understood; and there's another. Why didn't Newt Lee find the body sooner than he did? How did he see it from the place he said he saw it, when the police couldn't see it from there? How did he know the body was that of a white girl when he first saw it, when it took the police several minutes to discover that it was a white girl?

SUSPICIOUS OF LEE.

"I don't believe Newt Lee had anything to do with that murder, but I'll always believe he knew something about it. You know these negroes have got a strange, peculiar way of transmitting information among themselves. I remember during the war when all the negroes down we got news of battles from the negroes long before the newspapers got the news.

"I'm afraid Lee didn't have to go down there to know that a girl had been murdered. I'm afraid he didn't have to look at her to know it was a white girl. But that old man Lee was one of the most remarkable negroes that I've ever seen. I wish I had his nerve and his endurance." Looking at the detectives Mr. Rosser said, "The dirty trick you've played on that negro should have shamed you long ago.

"They hammered at him from daylight till dark. They didn't let him sleep. When one would play out, another would start. They even fired pistols near his ear. Oh, what he went through with only the detectives know! But he wore them out, he wore out dozens of them. But he ended every statement with 'Before God, I'm telling the truth.'

LEE JUST A SIDESHOW.

"I believe that he knows something else, but he is a sideshow in this case. Lee said Gantt met Frank; Frank looked surprised. And he had sense enough to know and to say why Frank looked surprised. Did you ever take a look at Gantt, and you know, had been discharged, and even the negro said that he thought Gantt had come there to 'frank dirt.' Both Lee and Gantt now say that Frank jumped back.

"They didn't say that at the coroner's inquest. You can't destroy old Lee, but you can knock a limb off occasionally. Suppose Frank did jump back? Why, look at that man!" pointing to Frank. "You can take a girl like Mary Phagan, and put 'em on the fourth floor together and she could make him jump out of the window. He doesn't come from a fighting breed.

"Not since Titus have they been noted for fighting. There was a time when the Roman legions were knocking at Jerusalem's door, but they defended their homes so timorously that the race was almost annihilated. Since then it's been scattered over the face of the earth, and the dominating race in each country always has persecuted the Jew. I don't mean that individuals will not fight, but they are not fighters as a race. They are wayfarers among the people.

FRANK PHYSICALLY WEAK.

"This boy physically is a weakling. Mentally, he is a giant. I don't say there's not bravery among his people; but it is not bravery of a rampant, bulldozing nature. If my little friend Dorsey had trouble with that big fellow Gantt, and had suddenly come upon him, he would have jumped back. Big as I am, I at least would have gotten out of the reach of his fist. Oh, what an idiotic little groveling, snakelike suspicion!

"I deny that Frank threw suspicion on Gantt. Scott does say now that Frank told him that Gantt was familiar with the girl, but Scott didn't say that to me, and he didn't say it in the report to his agency, nor in the report to the police department which by agreement they were furnished twenty-four hours in advance of us.

MORE SUSPICIONS.

"One other suspicion. He told Newt Lee, when Newt arrived there, that he could go and stay away until 6 o'clock. But he brought him back at 6 o'clock, when he knew that the negro, if he performed his duty faithfully, would go over the whole building in thirty minutes and go right where her body lay. It is inconceivable that he would keep Lee away for two hours by a trick, and then let him roam unchecked over the factory. Then what did Frank do? He went to his home and read like a decent man. And he laughed when he found a joke. But my friend Hooper would have you believe that the laugh was a part of his plot. Gentlemen, do you believe that he would have left the body there to be found by the negro?

"Another thing. They say that Frank was there when the girl went into the factory. You know it because Frank readily said he was there. The detectives didn't even have to fish for it. But it turns out that he was not the only man there. If he had been the only man, we might see where the Pinkertons' suspicion would point toward him. He was there in his open office doing his work. There were two young men on the fourth floor who could have gone to any part of the factory without his seeing them. They have tried to dispute this, but the evidence has shown that it is as certain as the sunlight—as certain as that I am laboring in pain to make this speech to you. But that is not all.

AND CONLEY WAS THERE.

"Conley was there. Unfortunately it came out only day before yesterday that another negro was there—a negro of lighter hue. They were there with every opportunity for murder. And nobody but the Infinite knows who the other negro was or how many others might have been there.

"These facts cast away forever the suspicion that Frank committed the crime because he was in the factory. They cast suspicion away from all but mean and narrow minds. Oh, Father of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, may no such prejudiced suspicion rankle the minds of this jury!

"Arnold has dwelt on this point, and you must not hold it against me if I fail to cover the ground as well as this legal giant," pointing to Mr. Arnold. "Is it possible that you Anglo-Saxon men have forgotten the nature of the negro? And would you believe Conley in preference to this man?" pointing to Frank. "Who is Conley? Who did he used to be? And was he like his old self when you saw him? Conley is a plain, beastly, ragged, filthy, lying nigger. Have I overstated that?

"Starnes there knows and I have not; and Black knows it; and Chief Beavers has gotten off his dignity enough to talk to the negro and knows it. Conley is a plain, dirty, filthy, lying, drunken and probably lousy nigger. You didn't see him like that. And I ask why? I ask my friend Black of the bad memory. People have laughed at Black in this court room, but John was trying to tell the truth. Scott left the stand in a heap worse fix. Some men are stronger up here in the head than Scott. Scott mightd etect a louse with a eyeglass, but I've heard of his detecting nothing else.

CONLEY "SLICKED UP."

"Black says Conley came to the court slicked up. Think of what they did. They got a dirty, black negro and in order to give impetus to his testimony they had a barber cut his hair and shave him, and they gave him a bath, and he came here like a slicked onion. Whoever played that trick was unworthy of the name 'white man.' Why didn't they let you see him as he was, with his spreading nose through which probably tons of cocaine have been sniffed?

"Did you ever read Perigrine Pickle? He picked up an old woman at the edge of London. She was dirty and filthy, and with her was a girl who was dirty and filthy but beautiful. Pickle bought her from the old woman and sent her out to his country place with instruction that she be cleaned up. And old navy lieutenant scrubbed her like he would the deck of a ship, and then they bought her fine clothes and taught her to dance a little and sing a little, and then they took her to London and launched her as a duchess just to see how easily society could be fooled. And she filled the role to a queen's taste till she got in a row about a whist game. I wish I could remember the words about that row.

"So my friend Dorsey's allies—I don't say he did it—shaved this Conley's brute-like countenance; they took the filthy rags from his back, and they tried to make him look like a respectable negro when they brought him before you. I wish I knew the name of the man who did that dirty trick. I would call it now.

FLAYS JIM CONLEY.

"Who is Conley? He's got a vicious character. He's a liar. The rule is that it's not very hard to find somebody whom nobody will believe. If they sent an angel to enumerate men, they'd pass Dalton-by. But he found somebody that believed him. Whom did Conley fool? Who believes him? Those little factory girls knew him. He was a vile dog beneath them, but they knew he was a dog. They let him sweep the dirty floors beneath their feet, but they wouldn't stand sponsor for him.

"Who gives him a character? Do you, Strauss? Do you, John? If you do, John Black, stand up. I'll stake my life you don't, Campbell. There's Rosser, who sprang from the same ancestry as I did. I'll stake my life you wouldn't hang a dog upon his testimony, would you, Rosser? Where is the man who says his character is good? Where is the man who said, 'I'd believe him on oath?' Show him to me. You can't do it.

"And yet, gentlemen of the jury, they want you to believe him to the extent of hanging that young man over there. I thank God that in this darkness there is not a creature so vile, Anglo-Saxon or African, Jew or Gentile, who would believe that loathsome negro. Gentlemen, his honor will charge you that if Frank were a pervert, that it be were the worst pervert on earth, that shouldn't influence you in making your decision here. That question has been brought in here by this dirty, lying, low-down negro. I know that the very whisper of it nauseates every one of you. Gentlemen, if you consider that, if you let one inkling of that into your brains in your deliberations, you violate your oath.

GREATEST INJUSTICE.

"That is the greatest injustice in this case, the bringing in of that testimony. It was done with only one purpose under the sun—to obscure the main issue. Oh, justice, thy God-like quality that makes the difference between heaven and hell, that makes life worth living, step in here." I will never have words to express my indignation.

"Suppose some white-skinned Anglo-Saxon faced this lying negro. What a shame that would be! What a shame it would be to accuse him! Is it any more of a shame that you accuse this son of Abraham and consider seriously the charge against him?"

Attorney Rosser paused. He was pale. He drew out his watch and looked at it. He appeared very nervous and his hands trembled so that he had difficulty getting the watch back into his pocket. He asked the court to adjourn. "It's only within five minutes of the regular time of adjournment," said he, "and rm between two subjects. I wouldn't like to start again now."

Judge Roan then ordered adjournment at 12:25 o'clock until 2 o'clock.

Several friends approached Mr. Rosser anxiously, but he assured them he would be able to continue his speech at the afternoon session. Frank, the defendant, shook hands with him warmly and congratulated him upon his speech.

While they're discussing rural credits, why not some accommodation also for us city fellows?

The Earning Capacity Of the W. & A. Road.

The increasing value and importance of the Western and Atlantic railroad is impressively witnessed in the annual report of its lessees recently submitted to the State Railroad Commission. These figures show that the road's earning capacity is far greater than that of any other line in Georgia and is growing steadily and rapidly by hundreds of thousands of dollars. The State is thus admonished of the vital need of giving timely and careful thought to the future of this great property in order that its interests may remain unimpaired.

The lessee's report is worth noting somewhat in detail, for, its every item speaks eloquently of what the Western and Atlantic is worth today and of what it can be made to produce in years to come, if its affairs are wisely administered. The gross earnings of the road for the fiscal year recently ended amounted to three million, one hundred and ninety-three thousand and five dollars; for the preceding year, they were two million, nine hundred and twenty-two thousand, one hundred and twelve dollars. The operating expenses for the fiscal year of 1912-13 were two million, two hundred and seventy-nine thousand, eight hundred and twenty dollars, considerably more than during the year before. Yet the gross earnings of the year just ended show an increase of nearly two hundred and seventy-one thousand dollars.

The road's net earnings for 1913 amounted to nine hundred and thirteen thousand, one hundred and eighty-four dollars as compared with eight hundred and eighteen thousand, five hundred and nineteen dollars in 1912. The net earnings per mile in 1913 were six thousand, six hundred and seventy-four dollars against five thousand, nine hundred and eighty-two dollars the preceding year.

Thus from every angle of its record, the Western and Atlantic looms forth as one of the most productive pieces of railroad property in all the South. We have frequently been reminded that it is worth today between sixteen and twenty million dollars, an amount sufficient to pay the State's entire public debt and leave many millions in the treasury; but the fact is that the value of this property is beyond all reckoning. For, in addition to the revenue it now brings the State, and the much greater revenue it should bring in the future, the Western and Atlantic can be made a permanent and natural arbiter of freight rates in Georgia.

But if these possibilities are to be realized, the State must deal with the W. and A. in a business-like and progressive manner. It must first inform itself accurately and completely concerning all the problems which the road's future administration involves. To that end, the Legislature has wisely provided for the establishment of a commission to study all these problems in detail and to make a report on which well-considered action can be based. This commission has the opportunity to render invaluable service in investigating the many far-reaching questions to which the new lease of the Western and Atlantic gives rise. Its responsibilities are great, for, upon the wisdom and foresight of the counsel it offers, the future interests of the State's road will doubtless very largely depend. It is to be hoped that the commission will soon begin its important task and will conduct its inquiry in such a way as to cover every point that concerns the continued growth and usefulness of this, the State's richest possession.

Our idea is that Envoy Lind would have made a good special correspondent.

We don't hear of boards of trade going to Canada with engraved invitations for Thaw.

Our advice to the leisure class is to hurry back from the hot summer resorts to the cool mountain climate of Atlanta.

Free Sugar, the Turning Point.

The Senate's adoption of the free sugar schedule by a vote of thirty-nine to thirty-four dispels the faintest doubt that the pending tariff bill is to become a law. It was on this particular item that the enemies of the measure centered their attack and planted their hope of making a breach in the Democratic ranks. To Republican leaders, it seemed almost incredible six months ago that Southern Senators would stand unitedly for the complete removal of import duties on sugar; and, so, they conceived the apparently clever plan of leaguing sugar Democrats and wool Republicans in such a manner as to obstruct or weaken, if not actually defeat, the bill.

Indeed, it was long doubted that the administration would succeed in embodying free sugar in the Democratic measure; and a leader less determined and tactful than Mr. Wilson would probably have failed. But the policy of applying tariff revision to all sections and all interests alike proved to be as expedient as it was just; the administration's insistence upon free sugar as well as free wool commended the tariff bill to the entire country's approval because of its distinct fairness and consistency. Thus the boldest of strokes turned out to be the safest and unswerving honesty, the most effective politics.

The attack upon free sugar was led by the so-called "Progressives" as well as the Standpat Republicans. The amendment on which the decisive vote was taken was offered by Senator Bristow. It proposed an immediate reduction in the duty on refined sugar from a dollar and ninety cents a hundred pounds to a dollar and fifty-two cents with gradual reductions in three and six years to a dollar and twenty-seven cents a hundred pounds; and it also retained undisturbed the preferential duty on Cuban sugar. The orthodox Republicans and the new-thought Republicans stood cheek by jowl in desperate efforts to put this amendment through; and they were vigorously supported by all those organized influences which for long years past have thwarted every attempt at honest tariff revision. They realized that here, if anywhere, the administration bill could be broken. Defeat of the free sugar schedule would lead easily to defeat of the free wool schedule; and sugar offered the subtlest temptation to any Democrat who might be wavering.

Yet, in the face of all these cunning and persistent influences, the Democratic column stood unshaken save for the two Louisiana Senators and their attitude had been known from the outset and had been discounted. They can scarcely be called deserters, for, so far as the tariff issue is concerned, they have never been Democrats. They voted, as everyone knew they would, with the Republicans; but their defection could no more check the sweep of the great Democratic measure than the casting of two pebbles could stay the onward flow of the Mississippi. Free sugar went through by a majority of five votes, making assurance doubly sure that the bill in its entirety will pass.

The fact is the Republicans have long since lost heart in their reactionary fight. They must now be convinced that further resistance can serve only to prolong a debate that is entirely futile and really meaningless. From their own political point of view they might be justified in obstructive tactics, were there a possibility of amending the bill in any important particulars. But since there is no such possibility, as the adoption of the free sugar schedule shows, their efforts for delay are stupidly unpatriotic. The comment of the New York Herald in this connection is noteworthy:

> "The country is not alarmed at the effect of the schedules and although, so long as the bill is pending, uncertainty is bound to be reflected to a limited extent, the business interests are taking renewed courage. That is no excuse, however, for not passing the tariff bill. It should be a law before August ends."

Democratic leaders are considering a plan to extend the daily sessions of the Senate to seven or ten hours so that if the opponents of the bill are bent upon making long-winded speeches merely for the purpose of delay, they will soon be exhausted. This should be done. Congress' time is too valuable to be wasted by obstructionists and the country's business is too important to be held indefinitely in suspense over a measure which everyone agrees is going to pass.

Atlanta continues to occupy a fairly good place in the Alabama league.

Peachtree Creek.

There should be no further delay in the vitally important work of dredging Peachtree creek so that its flow may be a help instead of a hindrance to the operation of the city's new sewage disposal plant. The bed of this stream is now clogged with drift-wood and accumulations of other matter; as a result it is sluggish in rainless seasons and subject to heavy overflows in time of torrents, either of which conditions will seriously interfere with the efficiency of the sewage plant.

Continued neglect of this situation will expose the interests of the entire community to a grave peril. Health as well as property is at stake. The Peachtree disposal plant is designed to care for something like half of the city's sewage. It represents an investment of public funds amounting to more than a quarter of a million dollars. It cannot do the work required unless the creek is freed of its present obstructions.

It is to be hoped that the Board of County Commissioners on whom this task devolves will take immediate steps in the right direction. The fact that the work has not already been done seems due to the lack of a clear understanding between the city and county officials. The latter, however, are now fully apprised of the need of prompt action and in keeping with their record where matters of public interest are concerned they will, we are sure, proceed as expeditiously as possible.

It should be added in this connection that Peachtree creek ought not only to be dredged but also cleansed and kept clean from this time forward. If the stream gives off offensive odors as it flows near residential districts, the cause should be ascertained and removed. Manufacturing plants should not be permitted to use the creek as a dumping place for refuse. It could be converted into an asset; certainly it should not be a nuisance.

OUR DAILY BREAD

X—SECURING THE WHEAT.

By Frederic J. Haskin

The beginning of bread making is in the preparation of the soil for the seed wheat. The quality of the bread depends greatly upon the chemical composition of the soil in which the wheat, from which the flour is made, is grown. This chemical composition may change from year to year because of climatic changes, or from the loss of certain properties taken from it by the wheat itself. Consequently, the soil of the great wheat fields of the country is being subjected to chemical analysis in order that the modern farmer may be able to supply the desired qualities to the grain. The experiment stations connected with the various state agricultural colleges are giving much attention to soil analysis and this is one of the factors which has aided in the improvement of the quality and nutriment of the modern loaf of bread.

It was only in 1840 that the first book advocating the application of chemistry to agriculture was written by the German chemist, Liebig. Since then experiments and scientific tests of the soil have become general throughout Europe and America. The enormous wheat fields of the western states have an important influence upon the bread conditions of the entire world, consequently, the efforts made by the department of agriculture to keep records of the soil conditions are now becoming recognized as of great economical value not only to the farmer who desires a large wheat crop, but also to the bakers who desire a wheat crop which will provide the flour required for good bread.

The quality of wheat is gauged from two distinct viewpoints, that of the farmer and that of the miller. A farmer's idea of a good wheat is the variety which gives him the largest monetary return per acre. Both bulk and quality enter into this calculation of value. The quality of wheat to the miller depends upon three things, its percentage of dirt, weed seeds and other impurities, the percentage of water in the composition of the grain, and a most important, though hard to determine, quality known as "strength." The modern methods of growing, cleaning and threshing wheat, made possible by the wonderful American machinery, have gone far toward establishing the first requisite. The second, that of moisture, must be largely indeterminate, each year because of the varying quality of rainfall.

The farmer's part in the production of bread con*cludes only* with the delivering of the wheat either to the miller or the commission merchant. He has all the responsibility of preparing the soil, in which process he has all the help which modern science can give regarding chemical fertilization to be added to supply any lacking chemical quality.

Great natural waterfalls, such as Niagara Falls, have been made to drive dynamos and the electricity thus generated has been employed to combine the free nitrogen of the air with some other product which will give to the farmer the chemical quality his soil requires. Formerly large quantities of guano from Peru and nitrate of soda from Chili were imported for the development of American wheat land. With the threatened exhaustion of these products came the chemical development of two new nitrogenous fertilizers which can be supplied at a price quite within reach of the average farmer. In Norway and Germany as well as in this country great electro chemical laboratories operated by natural water power have been established which are supplying fertilizers to aid the farmer enrich his wheat field.

The effect of supplying additional nitrogen to the soil has seemed almost impossible, but is attested by actual chemical experiments. Tests made show greater gain in England than in the United States probably because the smaller farm areas of England develop more concentrated methods of work. When the average crop was thirteen bushels an acre without the use of fertilizer it was increased at an English experiment station to fifteen bushels by the introduction of a fertilizer containing phosphorous, lime, potash and all the other elements of plant food except nitrogen. When nitrogen was supplied the average yield was raised to twenty-one bushels an acre, and by the supply of a complete fertilizer including all the elements, the yield rose to thirty-five bushels per acre, about two and a half times the average yield of American wheat fields. In this connection it must be noted, however, that in England the grade of American wheat is recognized as the standard of 100, while that of the home grown is only 65 in comparison.

The development of American machinery has had a most important influence upon the increase in the use of raised white bread, because it has made possible the handling of grain with a speed and facility which would have been impossible under the older methods of harvesting and handling. It is said that the inventor of the reaper has been as great a benefactor to humanity in *the production of food as was the in*ventor of the cotton gin in the production of clothing. The mechanical reaper doubled the production of wheat per capita in this country, and also released a large proportion of the agricultural population for other industries, thereby indirectly aiding in the industrial advancement of the country. The first reaper was invented by Obed Hussey in Ohio in 1813, but little notice was attracted to it. Other men had the idea in mind and the machine was patented by Cyrus McCormick in 1831.

The first McCormick reaper was propelled by horses and the motion for operating the different parts was derived from the outer of two wheels. It included a serrated reciprocating blade for cutting the grain, operated in fingers for supporting the grain being cut, and a platform to receive the cut grain deposited upon it by a sort of reel. This machine cut grain slowly and imperfectly as compared with the great and intricate harvesting machinery in use today, but it worked an agricultural revolution. In 1858 the March brothers, of Illinois, invented a machine which would deliver a swath of grain into a receptacle in the machine where two men standing could bind it as fast as it was cut. By 1865 fifty of these machines were built. The scarcity of farm-help due to the number of men enlisted as soldiers during the Civil war was influential in establishing the use of both the harvester and the binding machine, which could care for a large crop of grain with three or four men.

The automatic binding attachment to reapers was the need next recognized and this was patented in 1875 by an inventor using wire for binding. This was found objectionable in the handling of the grain, and a single thread bind twine was substituted. By 1880 this had been perfected, and by 1884 all steel machinery was in use. By 1898 the complete harvester, including ball bearings for all of the parts, was in full working order. These machines depended upon horses for propelling power. Now the motor is replacing the horse on many great modern farms.

Threshing by hand with the old-time flail was a more tedious and laborious process than cutting the grain with a scythe, so the invention of the threshing machine was almost as necessary as the reaper, and it was patented about the same time. In 1837 the first patent was awarded for a machine for threshing and cleaning the grain. These portable threshing machines have been familiar figures in farming regions for the past half century. A machine will travel from farm to farm, caring for grain in a few hours which would have taken a number of men several weeks to thresh less perfectly. Now the great farms of the west employ a combined harvester and thresher which in a few minutes cuts, threshes, winnows and puts in sacks the wheat, at a cost of $1.25 an acre.

Why Mayors Refuse to Run for Re-Election.

BY BRAND WHITLOCK.

"So you're the mayor, are you? Why, I thought you were an older man."

"I suppose you have a smart secretary to write your speeches for you, haven't you?"

"Why is it an Irishman can't get a job under your administration?"

"Why is it that a German can't get a job under your administration?"

"Why is it that a Pole can't get a job under your administration?"

"Why is it that a Hungarian can't get a job under your administration?"

"Why is it that you never appoint anybody but foreigners under your administration?"

"I know you don't mind what they say about you, but I never could be mayor. I'm too sensitive."

"Do you say all those things that are in the paper or do you just let the reporters make them up out of their own heads?"

"I have always thought I would like to be mayor myself, but of course my business is important and politics are too low for me."

"Of course, if I wasn't a good friend, I wouldn't tell you what he said about you, but you ought to know it."

"That was an awful roasting you got in the paper last night. I thought you might not see it, so I saved it for you."

"I'd rather go out to see you at your home in the evening and not bother you at the office during the daytime. We can have more time to talk, too."

"City work doesn't take up much of your time, does it, with so many subordinates to look after things? I suppose you have some man in each department who knows how to run it."

"Don't you think our cities would be much better governed if a better class of people would take more of an interest in politics?"

"I'll tell you what would be a good thing; issue an order to the police to make the automobiles stop speeding."

"I'm glad I happened to meet you this evening; I want to make a complaint about a policeman. I certainly wasn't going over eighteen miles at the outside, and he—"

"Don't you think a commission form of government would be much better than a mayor?"

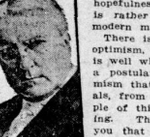
INTELLIGENT OPTIMISM

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

There is an intelligent optimism, and there are several varieties of fool optimism.

There is a theological optimism that claims to have proved that this is "the best possible world;" it is a hopefulness built on logic, and is rather unconvincing to the modern mind.



There is a kind of self-willed optimism, an assumption that all is well whether it's well or not, a postulating, assertive optimism that grins even at funerals, from a sense of duty. People of this cult are rather trying. They are always telling you that "all is for the best" when you know very well that certain things are for the worst.

Intelligent optimism, however, does not declare that all is good, including the devil and disease, but it asserts that the general laws of progress is upward, that there is much good in things as they are, that it is conducive to our comfort and efficiency to let our minds dwell upon that rather than upon the evil, and that we are capable of making things better and propose to do so.

Our confidence in the constant improvement of the world is not a matter of faith. We do not need to shut our eyes, cross our fingers, and repeat a creed. Our assurance is based upon knowledge. An understanding of history, of the conditions of society in former times compared to this time, and of the steady growth of liberty and civil rights, forms the foundation of our conclusion.

Further ground for our hopefulness consists in our realization that it is in men's power to improve the world they live in. We are finding out that human welfare grows, not only by Providence or superhuman "laws," but also by our own efforts. By organized exertion we have overturned tyrannies, abolished slavery, removed plagues and rendered life in the twentieth century a hundred times more agreeable than it was in the eighteenth. What we have done we can continue to do. We can, for example, improve our state, we can produce wealth less wastefully and distribute profits more fairly, we can raise the condition of the workingman, liberate women, give children better training, curb swollen fortunes and wealth-combinations, take better care of the unfortunates, and do much toward preventing crime and poverty. We no longer look to kings and nobles to do those things for us, we no longer merely pray and hope for the Deity to do them, we are conscious of the ability to help along by our own activities. Hence our optimism.

But optimism is not only a logical affair. It is a state of mind, a temperamental product. Wherever you find health, vigor and work you find optimism. Pessimism is a secretion of a morbid mind, of weakness, anemia or idleness.

We are optimists because we are better fed, housed and clothed, have more books and newspapers, have the remedy for social wrongs in our own hands in the agency of democracy, and in short have a faith and joy in life and its possibilities not based upon tradition or authority, but upon facts, upon instincts, and upon the consciousness of our own strength.

That is why this great people front the future with "morning faces," and refuse to melt in fear at the alarms of the calamity howlers.

Mayor Gaynor

(Harper's Weekly.)

Mr. Gaynor's popularity is based in no small degree on his literary and historical equipment. He keeps people from being bored by giving them racy anecdotes about John Calvin, and racy extracts from Epictetus, when they expect him, being a politician, to hand them nothing but rubber-stamp expressions and ideas. When we undertake, however, to elect a mayor in one of our great cities we have to decide something more than whether he is amusing. We have to decide something more than whether he has ability. It is important to know whether he is honest. Mr. Gaynor is characterized by intellectual tortuousness, he is very subtle, and the positions which he takes are dictated by what he wishes to accomplish, rather than by simple observation of the needs of the city.

Last week we gave an important illustration of this in the evil charter that he endeavored to inflict upon New York. We shall now give a light illustration of the same characteristic, showing him posing as a defender of a free civilization when an attempt was first made to regulate traffic in the congested streets of New York. Justice Gaynor was on the bench at the time. In 1905 there was an application made to him to restrain Commissioner McAdoo from enforcing the same kind of traffic regulations that are now in force throughout the city. A certain real estate dealer thought his business was being interfered with, so he followed the usual and convenient method of getting a judge to interfere with the administrative authorities. Gaynor, in deciding in favor of the real estate man, made the following observations:

> Every approach to said square is guarded and picketed by mounted men like the approach to a military camp or headquarters. It is a most extraordinary sight. . . . For the legislature to place control of the local administration of highways in a constable or the head of the police would be a most extraordinary event. It would be so contrary to the whole course of English and American law as to excite surprise. . . . Our government is one of laws and not of men. And it cannot possibly endure on any other basis. Those who advocate the changing of our police into a military instead of a civil force and turning the city over to its commander, either do not know what they are saying or else they want to destroy our system of free government.

The law has been amended since then to overcome such objections, and it would be rather difficult, probably, for the most intense patriot to foresee the end of our civilization and freedom because vehicles are prevented by the police from tying themselves into knots at crowded corners.

This is not one of the most important episodes in the Gaynor career, but it is simple and it is clear, and it will do as a basis for the conclusion that not all of Mr. Gaynor's high sounding democracy is to be taken with too much seriousness. The most important question, however, in the New York City election is not Gaynor. It is Tammany. To get a vivid impression of what that venerable institution stands for, refresh your memory with the Nast cartoons in this issue.

Humors of the Chinese War

Humor, of a grim sort, of course, abounded in the revolution which established a republic in China. Frederick McCormick, in "The Flowery Republic" (Appleton's), tells of the formation of a corps in the north who gloried in the title, "Dare to Die." The rebels in Canton were not satisfied to adopt this term from their brothers, and delighting in the superlative and the extreme, called themselves the "Determined to Die." The first were merely willing martyrs, but the Cantonese were desperate for death. A foreign was dubbed them the "Much Wanchee Dies."

"Among the various military organizations that sprung up in Canton," says Mr. McCormick, "was a company of bomb throwers called the 'Bomb Pioneers.' Their uniform was a light blue foreign knitted underwear that fitted them as their own skins. They wore brown knitted socks supported by American garters. Over the underwear they wore shoulder braces from which were stretched across the breast white bands bearing the name of their organization. Their leaders wore blouses and caps and carried swords. In parades they sometimes carried arms full of bombs and were in danger of blowing whole streets to atoms. In public meetings on two occasions there were accidents in which numbers of people were killed and wounded."

INSURANCE CLUB IN ANNUAL CONVENTION

Sixth Meeting of Aniversary Club of Southern States Life Insurance Company

The sixth annual convention of the Anniversary club of the Southern States Life Insurance company was opened in the assembly rom of the Hotel Ansley Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

This organization is composed of the insurance agents of the Southern company who have produced over $100,000 worth of paid for business during the twelve months ending June 30. Fourteen agents qualified for membership in the club during the year just closed. Offices are won in this club based upon the amount of insurance written. The agent writing the most business is president, the next largest vice president and the leader in each state, vice president.

President Wilmer L. Moore, of the Southern States Life Insurance company, welcomed the convention, and warmly congratulated them upon their splendid showing. J. C. Walden, Sr., of Alabama, was installed as president, and J. E. Williams, of South Carolina, as vice president; T. Peters, Jr., Georgia vice president; B. B. Murray, Florida vice president; H. Clay Smith, Alabama vice president, and G. J. McDowell, South Carolina vice president.

The other members of the club are H. N. McAfee, H. Willis Hogg, Joe W. Vinson and J. T. Weems, of Georgia; Fred Hines, of South Carolina; L. E. Black, Jr., C. S. Gurr and J. R. Munroe.

Robert F. Moore, agency secretary of the Southern States Life Insurance company, was unanimously re-elected secretary of the Anniversary club.

A number of interesting papers and discussions took place at the opening session. The club was entertained at luncheon at the Capital City club by President Moore at noon Friday, and attended the baseball game in the afternoon. They will attend a theater party at night.

Another business session will be held Saturday morning. An elaborate banquet at the Hotel Ansley Saturday night will bring this interesting convention to a close.

PEACHTREE ROAD TO BE WELL OILED ONCE MORE

County Commission Orders Repairs Between Buckhead and Brookwood

Peachtree road will soon be one of the best drives around Atlanta. The county commission has ordered that oiling of the road from Brookwood to Buckhead commence not later than Saturday and every effort be exercised to finish the work within two days after starting.

The bed of this road is already in fine shape as it was broken up and made recently, and all it now needs is a good binder to hold it together. The oil will be used on the road is a California product.

The new stone crusher recently purchased by the city arrived Thursday and will be immediately installed at Tenth and Boulevard. It will be used to crush stone for the Butler street sewer, which is fast nearing completion with 100 men at work upon it.

The work of paving Moreland avenue was finished Thursday afternoon. The work was then inspected by President Ingram, of the Southern Bitulithic company, who has the contract for the work. He also looked over Marietta street and Georgia avenue.

CENRTAL CHURCH WILL SELL VALUABLE SITE

Rev. F. A. Ridley, pastor of the Central Baptist church, has returned from a vacation of three weeks in Sylva, N. C., and will fill his pulpit again Sunday at the morning and evening services. Music will be rendered by the choir, led by R. O. Bell.

The church has decided to sell its property at the corner of Forsyth and Garnett streets and expects to erect a new edifice in the immediate future.

CARRIAGE BUILDERS MEET HERE FRIDAY

Secretary H. A. White, of the High Point, N. C., Vehicle league, has called the fall convention of carriage builders for Atlanta for Wednesday. At this meeting, according to Secretary White, there will be about fifty prominent builders present. They will meet in the convention hall of the Hotel Ansley and at noon they will partake of a special dinner.

ORGANIST BLYTH TO PLAY AT AUDITORIUM

Former Assistant at Westminster Abbey, London, Will Have Atlanta Audience

E. Seton Blyth, the organist of Edinburg, Scotland, arrived in Atlanta Friday morning, on the invitation of Colonel W. L. Peel and the Music Festival association, and will be one soloist at the free concert at the auditorium-armory Sunday afternoon. His program will consist principally of selections which have never been heard before on the organ in Atlanta.

Mr. Blyth did organ and choir work at Westminster Abbey, London, under Dr. Frank E. Sawyer, and has played in nearly all the large cathedrals in England and Scotland. He came to America in 1911, and since that time has been organist and choir master at the Church of the Holy Comforter in Burlington, N. C. He has won considerable note in various American cities by his splendid recitals.

Mr. Blyth is one of a number of organists who are being brought to Atlanta this fall, from among whom will be selected a successor to Dr. Percy J. Starnes.

Bandit Who Roved With Jesse James Joins the Church

LEES SUMMIT, Mo., Aug. 22.—Cole Younger, the former bandit, became a member of the Christian church at a revival meeting here last night.

When the evangelist after finishing his sermon invited persons in the audience to join the church, Younger was one of the first to go forward to the altar rail.

At the conclusion of the service the evangelist said that those in the audience who cared to do so might remain and shake hands with Younger. There were a thousand persons present and all remained to congratulate the former member of the James gang on his conversion.

THEATRES

This week at the Forsyth is going to be one of the record-breakers of the season. The Hawaiian musicians with Toots Paka are wonderful in their performance on guitars. Grace DeMar has won a proud position for herself, and Willie Weston, with the aid of Howard Winburn has scored a hit that will count for a long time.

The bill for next week promises acts that have been drawn from the Keith houses to be features.

The Grand's presentation of "Victory" is popular. Hundreds of people are seeing the wonderful picture of the United States navy in action, as in peace and as it may act in war.

Commencing on Monday and continuing permanently the Grand will be the home of Kinemacolor, the natural color pictures. Jake Wells has arranged for the exclusive rights of the pictures in the entire south. There will be changes of scenes every other day and each day there will be presented black and white pictures, the best products possible to secure. Exhibitions will be continuous, daily from 2:30. The afternoon price of admission will be 5 cents, and commencing at 7 o'clock at night the price changes to 10 cents.

Patrons of the Bijou are reminded that the ticket office of this theater opened this morning at 9, and judging from the long line of buyers there will be a capacity attendance Monday when the Jewell Kelley company makes its initial bow to an Atlanta audience. "Her Fatal Shadow" has been chosen for the opening bill. This is said to be one of the most interesting and gripping melodramas that could have been selected.

HOME OF SMITH PICKETT BURNED TO THE GROUND

Frame Structure on Howell Mill Road Completely Destroyed by Flames

Fire starting about 6 o'clock Thursday morning totally destroyed the home of Smith D. Picket on the Howell Mill road, near Collier avenue, and next door to the home of T. B. Felder. The house was a two-story frame structure. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

When the fire broke out Mr. Pickett was alone in the house, his wife being in North Carolina. He says he awoke to find the house in flames, and was unable to save any household effects.

FARMERS' UNION PICNIC BRINGS IN NEW MEMBERS

Moultrie, Ga., Aug. 22.

Several hundred farmers attended a rally of the Farmers' union held today at Riverside, a suburb of Moultrie. The wives and children were also in attendance and a big basket dinner was a feature. The rally resulted in an increased membership of the organization in this county and a renewed effort to organize the county in every school district. President G. W. Newton, of the Colquitt county union, was master of ceremonies, and addresses were made by State Organizer R. F. Duckworth, J. P. Campbell, state superintendent of the boys' corn club work; J. G. Oliver, superintendent of the boys' corn club work in the second district, and Miss Lillie Forrest, one of the directors of the girls' canning club organizations. In the afternoon there was a business session when cooperative plans were discussed and outlined.

Dr. Smith Rumble Dead

BARNESVILLE, Ga., Aug. 22.—Dr. Smith Rumble, one of the leading physicians of this section, died here Wednesday night, after a lingering illness. He was about fifty years old, a member of the Methodist church, a K. P., and belonged to other orders. His burial will take place in this city. He is survived by his wife and several children.

MISS SUSIE BUTTOLTH DIED THURSDAY NIGHT

Marietta Woman Was Friend of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Was Gifted Artist

Miss Susie Buttolth, one of the most talented and accomplished women of the state, died at her home in Marietta, Ga., Thursday night. She had not been in the best of health for several weeks. Two operations in the past three months had been performed in an effort to save her, but her condition became worse and Thursday afternoon she sank rapidly and later died.

Miss Buttolth was known by every person in Marietta for her charity and kindness, and her death was a sad loss to her many friends.

She was a woman of many talents, her paintings and sculpture work having been exhibited in the salons of Paris and their worth is recognized in the art circles of the country. Her friends have been recipients of many priceless gifts of her work, but though many opportunities were offered she never entered the professional art fields.

Miss Buttolth was a close friend of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and had been since her girlhood. Mrs. Wilson's father, who was a Presbyterian minister in Rome, Ga., and the Rev. D. L. Buttolth, who was for so many years pastor of the Presbyterian church in Marietta, were close friends and through their fathers the two became intimate. Miss Buttolth visited Mrs. Wilson at Princeton a few years ago. Mrs. Wilson, a painter of much talent herself, appreciated the work of her Georgia friend and praised it highly.

The funeral will be conducted by Rev. Hugh K. Walker at the residence in Marietta at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon. The interment will be in the family burying ground.

DR. C. W. DANIEL AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Popular Pastor Has Returned From Vacation and Occupies Pulpit Sunday

Dr. Charles W. Daniel, who has been enjoying a rest of some two weeks in the mountains of North Carolina, will return to Atlanta and fill his pulpit Sunday.

RECOMMEND IMPROVEMENT FOR STATE SANITARIUM

Committee Has Investigated and Will Report Next Year to Legislature

That sweeping recommendations for improvements in the Georgia state sanitarium, especially in the matter of additional buildings, will be made to the next session of the legislature by the joint committees from the house and senate appointed to make an investigation of the state's property, was learned Thursday evening upon the return of the solons from Milledgeville.

A member of the committee who passed through Atlanta on his way home was frank to admit that all that could be accomplished with the appropriation was being done and that the superintendent had succeeded in putting the money to its best use.

A fuller appropriation was necessary, however, he said, to relieve some of the congested wards, especially in the matter of caring for children and the negro patients. More buildings are sadly needed and at least one must be erected withing another year. Two new structures would fill the want, according to this authority, but in lieu of enough money for both, the committee will insist that the general assembly appropriate a sufficient sum.

Aside from the fact that the sanitarium was found to be overcrowded, no blame was attached to the management.

MANGUM CANDIDATE FOR SHERIFF AGAIN

Rumor That He Would Withdraw From Race Unfounded—Other Names Talked

Positive announcement is made by Sheriff C. W. Mangum that he will be a candidate at the election next June to succeed himself. It has been rumored for some time that Sheriff Mangum would not be a candidate for reelection on account of ill health, but the sheriff declares this rumor has no foundation.

Rumor states that the friends of John Owens, chief deputy under the Mangum administration; Plennie Minor and Drew Lyddell are being urged to enter the race for sheriff. Mr. Owens declares there is nothing to the rumor.

"Such a report," declares Mr. Owens, "can only start with Sheriff Mangum's opponents. It is made in an effort to split the sheriff's friends so that the opposition can have better prospects of winning. I do not know about Mr. Lyddell or Mr. Minor, but I do know that Sheriff Mangum's other deputies will stand by him to a man."

You Folks Who Want Your Town to Grow--

DISEASE and poverty are twin-brothers to insanitary living-conditions.

Sickness cripples the working and earning capacity. Then follows poverty and distress. This means trouble for everybody.

Is your town clean and healthy? Is it disease-proof so far as correct sanitation can make it so?

Is the water-supply free from contamination?

Remember that a breeding-place of disease may be a scourge to your town. And remember, too, that such a scourge may take toll of your own home.

Our specialty is SANITARY ENGINEERING.

We have cleaned up and straightened out more than 300 towns. We have shown them beyond the shadow of a doubt that improvements are the best investment they ever made.

We want to improve your town and we can show you that it will pay you well from every point of view.

A town that is insanitary, unsightly, inconvenient and unattractive will never draw new population to itself.

More than that: it won't hold its present population. The young fellows growing up, the enlightened men and women are not going to stay where the conditions are bad and out-of-date.

Does your town want to grow? If it does and if YOU are concerned to have it grow the right way, write to us. We will give you all the information you want.

We plan, construct, finance and operate sanitary systems, water and power plants, paving and all municipal improvements. We can show you a big and successful record of our achievements.

FORECAST FOR SHOWERS CAUSED BREAK IN COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Private predictions of better weather in the southwest and reports of rain in Texas and Oklahoma gave cotton an unsettled appearance this morning. Liverpool was lower and the market opened with a decline of 6 to 7 points. There was good demand but offerings were aggressive and the market eased off to a net loss of 12 to 13 points.

About 11:40 for December buying orders were encountered and slight rallies occurred.

The early afternoon rally carried prices back to practically yesterday's close, but further private reports of showers in the southwest gave the market a generally unsettled tone and active months were 10 to 12 points net lower around 2 o'clock.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 22.—Cotton futures opened steady at a decline of 1 to 5 points on prices and rains reported in parts of Texas and the western cotton belt. After the call the forecast showing showers over a large part of the western belt increased selling and the market declined 9 to 11 points under upward to the chiefly from short sellers, although a little liquidation of long cotton was apparent. The market was steadied by the apparently poor condition report, which the trade as a whole believes will be largely justified at the end of the first half hour of business prices were 8 to 10 points under yesterday's close.

The detailed weather reports from official sources failed to confirm the private reports of rain in the western half of the belt, Oklahoma being returned as perfectly dry, while only the shower or scattered rains were noted in Texas. This caused covering of short cotton and early the market showed a still more unsettled buying for long account. Offerings were not liberal after these initial declines, but prices worked up to a level 3 to 5 points over yesterday's last quotations. Bulls were not aggressive and late in the morning the market was inclined to sag under dullness. At 1 noon prices were 2 to 4 points under yesterday's close.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 22.—Weather developments over night in the southwestern belt fail was widespread over night in the western half of Texas and Oklahoma, and indications are favorable for general and heavy rains. The rainfall during the next thirty-six hours in Arkansas, west Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee; partly cloudy and showery weather in the east of the belt and a little cooler over the entire northern half of the belt.

Rains prevailed in eastern Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas reported rains in the southern sections of the state. This rainfall on top of the rather good rainfall previously reported from Texas and Oklahoma during the past ten days comes in a couple of days and will mean much improvement in yield if followed by favorable weather. The statement that rain is too late to do good is largely the outcome of the bureau reports and is more a prophecy than real.

Liverpool came in poor, with futures as much as 5 lower than due, spots 5 off, sales 7,000. Universal reiteration in the trade that speculative freight engagements are on the market to be very strong to shade demand.

Our market eased in the early trading to 11.50c for October, but selling was restricted and this movement was rather in favor of buying. Bearish confidence has been upset by the recent upturn; bulls are confident, and the opinion prevails that rains are too late to help condition returns for the coming bureau report, which is expected to show a big yield to acres and have a bullish effect.

NEW YORK COTTON LETTER

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The market was very disappointing, but our market did not follow their decline, and has ruled very steady all day. The map showed some scattered showers and the forecast was for unsettled cooler and showers in Oklahoma, Arkansas and parts of Texas. Still this did not appear to bring out any selling of consequence, only scattered liquidation. Brokers who are identified with the bull forces seem to have bought orders on all such sorts, which was discouraging to the bearish element. It looks now as if the rains in Texas and Oklahoma now could not repair the damage already done by the continued heat and dry weather. A good many operators are expressing the belief that should rains come and cause a decline it would only be temporary and scattered.

INTERESTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MARKETS

Weather Reports, Crop Advices, Expert Opinions and Newspaper Comment

COTTON GOSSIP

Times-Democrat says: From a trade viewpoint the feature of yesterday's market was the probable effect of the long continued dry weather on the length of the staple in the Texas crop, especially in the western belt. This feature was a return of showery conditions over the eastern half of the belt. According to the weather reporting machinery of the general government unfavorable weather continues in Oklahoma and Texas and a general soaking rain seems as far off as ever. Today is August 22, on August 25 the agricultural bureau's cotton belt correspondents will compile and mail their condition reports to Washington. From the data and information in the possession of the talent, the government's reports will be based to ascertain the probable crop, practically all sections except Texas and Oklahoma, are reported to be in good condition in the Delta. Oklahoma will probably make the report showing the least favorable condition during the past thirty days, and they expect the Texas report will show a large part of the deterioration. The crop in Texas is very spotted. Some excellent crops will be made, being satisfactory progress, while other sections, small, but important, are reported as poor. Hilton indicates generally unsettled weather further precipitation and cooler in Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and north Louisiana and northern Mississippi; warmer tonight in northwest portion.

Map shows cloudy entire northern belt, cloudy to fair elsewhere in the central southwest between Texas, Oklahoma. Raining at Oklahoma City, scattered showers at Fort Worth. Conditions favorable for rains over all sections simultaneously. This is evidence of the fact that there is no wide diversity of opinion among prominent cotton merchants of Texas as to the status of the crop.

One of the most conservative cotton exchange who is considered a very good weather map reader said at a forecaster predicted yesterday as his reputation, so we are told, that there would be good general rains over the west to west within forty-eight hours. This would-be by morning. It is said on this forecast that the ring, which was so long out of cotton, came into the market, and Liverpool seems to be lower this morning, probably for the same reason. We do not know of any change in the situation. If the rains and showers do not soon see further temporary decline, but I believe the undertone of the market is going to be upward until confidence in the crop is again restored. Reports in relation to Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas is unquestionably correct, and now the market will probably work higher in anticipation of a very bullish governmental forecast about the close of 24 of September. This means only temporary

STOCK GOSSIP

Dow-Jones summary: Special meeting today of New Haven stockholders to authorize the issue of $97,352,400 twenty year 6 per cent convertible debentures. President Wilson will send message to congress on Monday dealing with the Mexican situation and his peace efforts. American locomotive company quits automobile field, closing big plant at Providence. The senate will vote today on the proposed wool tariff. Southern Pacific asked commission's permission to offer balance of $10,120,000 equipment certificates at 4 per cent discount instead of 4 per cent. Richmond, Atlanta and Memphis each receive today $250,000 crop money; Baltimore between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000. The strike in Missouri is nearly at an end; the miners are practically all back. Demands for the recognition of the union. American Car and Foundry receives orders for 1,200 cars. Northern Pacific and Great Northern machinists' wage increase and will not strike. The heads of the large steel companies say business had no decline to depress prices. While the Mexican problem is the disturbing factor, expect to see stocks work higher on a declining tendency.—Putter.

GRAIN GOSSIP

Chicago Inter Ocean says: Those bullish on wheat are inclined to take lighter pressure and say the market will do better. Sentiment in the corn is a little more bearish. Most of the bulls see nothing but higher prices. There are many traders who are bullish, but have sold out and are waiting for a chance to get anything in again. Some of the oats specialists figured big selling pressure today, and the market had to sold out, and they believe the December and May options have been well liquidated.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. say: Wheat—We look for a continuation of firmness and gradually higher prices.

Corn—The weather map shows light rains in portions of the belt, but most not west of the river with somewhat lower temperatures. The market continues to show an undertone of wonderful strength notwithstanding the generally bullish bearish sentiment.

Oats—We look for an improvement in the demand from shorts.

FINANCIAL BUREAU ON STOCKS

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Financial bureau says: The Balkan situation is the key to the existing negotiations for loans in London. The foreign markets for American stocks continue dull, with a downward tendency in prices. International exchanges have been kept down because money available for loans in New York on stock exchange collateral. The London stock exchange will be closed tomorrow. The market has probably fully discounted the reduction in the Chesapeake and Ohio dividend to 4 per cent. Nevada Consolidated Copper directors are scheduled to meet today, and the N. Y. C., R. I. & H. holds a special meeting. Information channels favor the purchase of standard issues for investment account. Turkey is offering buying opportunities, with the intention to accept moderate profits.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET FIRM IN LATE TRADING

Canadian Pacific, Atchison, St. Paul, Westinghouse and Lehigh Valley Led

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—First prices of stocks today showed an easing off among the more prominent issues. Trading was on a small scale and fluctuations were limited to unimportant fractions. Retirement of American Locomotive from the automobile industry caused a decline in the stock of nearly a point. Large selling orders were distributed in Steel and Union Pacific and their weakness soon permeated the whole market. Both Steel and Union Pacific yielded over a point each, touching 61¾ and 151⅝ respectively.

A decision cropped out in New Haven after the stockholders' meeting to ratify the proposed issue of $97,000,000 debenture bonds got under way, and it sagged to 98½, a new low record. Other stocks which had been creeping up slowly under relaxed support showed rising and speculation became stagnant.

The buying on both sides for unsettle and showery weather added to the selling movement and the recovery of the morning of 1 to 2 points the market steadied on detailed weather reports indicating very little precipitation in the Texas and Oklahoma belt, ending with prices 5 or 6 points up from the lowest.

Estimated receipts today 71,000 bales.

Speculative selling was focussed on the three specialties which have been the chief pressure on Steel. Mexican conditions were cited as the chief cause of depression.

Liquidation in the agricultural states were reported better, with rains in sections of the Canadian spring wheat belt, further stiffening the record-breaking foreign trade statement and taken into account, and the market firmed throughout the morning.

Selling of investment stocks, which recently have been liberal absorbers, attracted some attention. Declines of 1 to 2 points were effected in a few issues, but none of these stocks of particular interest.

Before noon, the movement was of small importance.

Afternoon operations were on a larger scale, causing a complete recovery of the morning's decline. Chesapeake and Ohio was bought actively, rising 2 points and now 1½.

Buying of stocks in which special considerations had figured imparted general firmness in late dealings when best prices were established. Canadian Pacific and Northwestern improved 2 points over those of other representative issues, averaged a shade above yesterday's closing prices.

GOVERNOR SLATON OFF FOR BIG CONVENTION

On Return He Will Announce Appointments, Atlanta Judgeship Among Them

Governor John M. Slaton, accompanied by Mrs. Slaton, will leave Saturday morning for Colorado Springs, Colo., where he goes to attend the meeting of the house of governors from every state in the union.

Upon the return of the governor to Atlanta a week hence, it is expected that he will at once announce his members of the several legislative ad interim commissions besides choosing the additional judge for the Atlanta circuit of the superior court and also appoint a state game commissioner to serve during his term in office.

The term of the present commissioner, Jesse E. Mercer, expires on September 1, although under the law he may continue in office until the governor sees fit to either reappoint him or name a successor.

It is a known fact that great pressure has been brought to bear on Governor Slaton, asking him to name a successor to Mr. Mercer, and the friends of the commissioner are quite apprehensive for fear that this will result in his being succeeded by some one of the many applicants for the place.

ATLANTA TO OBSERVE "TUBERCULOSIS DAY"

December 7 Set Aside as Day for Campaign Against Consumption

Churches, schools, labor unions, fraternal orders and other organizations to the number of 200,000 at least will be asked to join the anti-tuberculosis workers of the country in the observance of the Fourth National Tuberculosis day, which has been designated for December 7, according to an announcement issued today by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. This movement will be participated in by the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis association, of which Hr. Hugh M. Willet is president.

The movement will be furthered throughout the country by more than 1,000 anti-tuberculosis societies working through various state organizations and the national association. Personal appeals will be made to clergymen, school principals and leaders of various organizations, urging them to set aside a definite time during the ever-approaching or the week following December 7, for a lecture on tuberculosis.

Last year over 60,000 churches gave attention to this subject on Tuberculosis day. It is hoped this year to swell the number of churches to 100,000 and to urge similar action besides in a large number of the schools and other societies. The Tuberculosis day campaign will come this year during the Red Cross Christmas seal sale. It is planned to urge the churches of the country to take a definite part in this movement.

The observance of Tuberculosis day was indorsed last year by President Taft, Cardinal Farley, Colonel Roosevelt and many other prominent churchmen and public officials. Proclamations calling upon the people to observe this day were issued by governors of more than a dozen states and by the mayors of a considerable number of cities.

W. LEE RICHARDS DIES UNEXPECTEDLY AT FARM

Body of Atlantian's Son Will Be Brought Here for Interment

Mr. W. Lee Richards, a well-known south Georgia farmer, died unexpectedly Tuesday night at his home at Brucker, Georgia, near Albany. He was attending to matters on his farm when he dropped dead from some unknown cause.

Mr. Richards had been living in south Georgia, but two years, but had formed many warm friend there who will regret to learn of his death. He had spent most of his life in north Georgia around Cherokee county, where he was formerly sheriff. He was a popular county official and prominent in local affairs. He married Miss Webb, of this section, the daughter of ex-State Senator Webb, and two children survive the union.

The body will be brought to Atlanta Friday afternoon and the funeral will be from the residence of his father, 281 North Boulevard, Saturday at 12 o'clock. Interment will be in West View.

He is survived by a wife and two children; his father, John B. Richards, of Atlanta; three brothers, J., B. and C. G. Richards, of Atlanta, and M. A. Richards, of New York; four sisters, Mrs. Ida Compton, Miss Alice, Miss Daisy and Miss Annie Richards, of Atlanta.

WINE MERCHANT TOURS ITALY

His tour was a sort of celebration as he did not expect to be well again.

Mr. James Raggi, Wine merchant, 624 Montgomery Street, San Francisco, well known in the Italian banking quarter, was in one of the San Francisco hospitals with dropsy, due to Brights Disease. Medical skill had been exhausted and friends and physicians thought his days numbered.

Editor R. M. Wood, of San Francisco, who had recovered from Bright's disease, induced Raggi to take up the same treatment, Fulton's Renal Compound. In a few months the case was yielding and within a year his doctors reported him normal and he left for a tour of Italy.

These facts can be proved by anyone having friends in San Francisco.

If only one-tenth of the recoveries in Bright's Disease reported by patients under Fulton's Renal Compound are true, then in view of the admission of the books that under their best prescriptions recovery in chronic Bright's Disease is impossible, there would still be put one thing to do. If you have Bright's Disease you owe it to yourself and family to try Fulton's Renal Compound before giving up. It can be had at Edmondson Drug Co., 11 N. Broad street and 196 N. Pryor st., Atlanta, Ga.

Ask for pamphlet on our investigation into the curability of Bright's Disease or write John J. Fulton Co., San Francisco.—(Advt.)

MRS. GODBEE AND LAWYERS

Slain Man's Fortune Is To Be Used To Defend Slayer

Judge Godbee's Children Will Use Inheritance to Free His Divorced Wife

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 22.—Children of Judge Walter S. Godbee, who inherited a part of his $50,000 estate, will devote their inheritance to the defense of Judge Godbee's divorced wife, who slew him and his bride at Millen, Ga., last Monday. Mrs. Edna Godbee is now in the Jenkins county jail and has no funds, but her three children by Judge Godbee declare they will aid her.

Judge Godbee's estate will be divided among his children by the terms of his will, which was probated here yesterday. A daughter by his first wife, now living in Augusta, will get the major part of the estate, but the other children will get substantial portions. Frank Godbee, son of the woman who did the slaying, was appointed temporary administrator of the estate.

G. C. Dekle and A. C. Dixon, Mrs. Godbee's attorneys, who are expected to wage the greatest defensive murder trial battle ever known to south Georgia, have ordered Mrs. Godbee to receive no visitors except members of her immediate family. Hundreds of friends who called upon her caused too great a strain on her nerves.

Mrs. Godbee has made no detailed statement except to her attorneys, who assert that when the reasons for the slaying are made known she will be fully vindicated.

Archibald Beyer, brother of the slain Mrs. Godbee, passed through Savannah Thursday en route to Millen. He declared that he asked no vengeance, but wished to see justice done.

Hunnicut avers his wife fell through the porch of their home at 26 Vernon place and sustained internal injuries. It is for the alleged injuries to his wife he asks damages.

WOULD SET ASIDE NEW COURT HOUSE CONTRACT

Architect Gibbs Enters Protest Against Tiling in Fulton's Structure

A suit to have set aside the contract between Fulton county and the H. W. Johns-Manville company, of New York, under which the New York company is to put the cork floor tiling in the new court house, was filed in superior court Friday by H. S. Gibbs, an Atlantian who acts as agent for several manufacturing companies. The contract calls for the expenditure of $16,000.

The ground on which Mr. Gibbs bases his suit is an alleged failure of the New York concern to come up to the requirements of the architect's specifications.

The H. W. Manville company and the members of the county commission are named as defndants in the suit.

ASTYPTODYNE CHEMICAL CO., WILMINGTON, N. C. Mount Olive, N. C.

GENTLEMEN:—

Some time ago we purchased from you six bottles of your Astyptodyne. We have found it to be one of the best remedies that we have ever used to cure almost any kind of cut, bruise or sore. We have used it on several horses and mules which had old sores and fistulas on their shoulders and backs, and in every instance the place has been entirely cured in less than a week. We have used it on one of our workmen who had a sore on his leg which the doctor had failed to cure after considerable treatment, and he was entirely cured after a week's treatment.

One of our men took some on sugar for heavy cold and it cured him in a short while. We consider it the finest medicine to have around which we have ever seen, and cannot recommend it too highly.

Yours truly, BELL LUMBER COMPANY, Per J. R. Bell.

At all Dealers. 25c., 50c. and $1.00 Bottles.

Write for booklet which tells all about ASTYPTODYNE and its many uses.

"Prejudice and Perjury Constitute the State's Case"

Plot Alleged By Hooper Is Ridiculed By Arnold In Masterly Argument

Attorney Asserts That Frank Could Not Have Known That Mary Phagan Would Not Come for Her Pay on Friday, He Declares That Jim Conley Killed the Little Girl With Robbery as His Motive—Here Is His Speech

In his speech to the jury Thursday Attorney Reuben R. Arnold, for the defense, undertook two things.

The first, to riddle the "plot," as he termed it, outlined by Attorney Hooper, for the state. That is, to explode the theory of the state's case against Frank.

Second, to make out a case against the negro, Jim Conley, that would be as strong as the state's case against Frank.

There were other brilliant features, but these were the two big points that Attorney Arnold hammered at with all of his ability.

Taking up the plot he argued that it was ridiculous to contend that Frank, on Friday, anticipated making advances to Mary Phagan on Saturday, because all the help were being paid off Friday afternoon and, therefore, in no way on earth for him to have known at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon—the hour when Jim Conley claims Frank instructed him to come back and watch Saturday morning—that Mary Phagan would not come and get her pay with all the rest. He argued that it was ridiculous for Conley to claim he was watching for Frank Saturday morning, when according to his own testimony he let Montsen Stover come into the factory after hearing Mary Phagan scream upstairs. He argued that it was ridiculous for Conley to claim he watched regularly for Frank from June, 1912, until January, 1913, when during that period the Clark Woodenware Co. was running only one half the first floor period the Clark Woodenware Co. was running only one half the first floor and neither Conley nor even Frank would have had the right to lock the front entrance, used by the woodenware employees as well as the pencil factory employees.

He took up every detail of the state's theory and with powerful logic undertook to show that this theory is unreasonable and absurd.

Then on to Conley. If he had been the solicitor and the negro had been the defendant charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, Attorney Arnold could not have surpassed himself in trying to convince the jury of Conley's guilt.

He argued that the brutal manner in which Mary Phagan was killed is characteristic of a negro. "This man," said he, of Frank, "does not come of a violent race." He argued that Conley's opportunity for killing the girl was vastly better than Frank's opportunity.

His theory, constructed with consummate skill, was this: That Conley, on that Saturday morning, was half drunk, his passions inflamed, crazy for money; that he lurked in the dark passageway on the first floor at the foot of the stairs, according to his own admission; that he watched with greedy eyes every woman and girl who passed by him; that he exhibited on the witness stand to a minute detail the kind of dresses and shoes worn by the girls; that Mary Phagan came down the stairs with her mesh bag in her hand; that Conley grabbed it, she refused to turn it loose and screamed, he struck her the blow over the left eye and knocked her down, and she fell with the back of her head as she fell; that Conley stepped her body through the elevator shaft, hung around the factory until Frank left, went down into the basement and finished his brutal work, that then, finding the front door locked and also being afraid to show himself on the front, broke open the back door of the basement and went his way.

The law is that before a man can be convicted on circumstantial evidence the circumstances must be so strong as to exclude every other reasonable hypothesis except that of the guilt of the accused.

If Attorney Arnold had laid down this principle to fit his case, he could not have made it fit the case more perfectly to suit his immediate purpose of clearing Frank.

His job was to convince the jury that Mary Phagan's murder can be explained just as easily—if not more easily—on the theory that Conley did it, as on the theory that Frank did it.

"My friend Mr. Hooper made some remarks about circumstantial evidence—now powerful it is. He began with the witnesses who prove the circumstances are just as liable to make mistakes as are witnesses of an actual tragedy. It positively sickens a man to read of the many mistakes that have been made in circumstantial evidence cases. I, and probably you, recall the famous Durant case of San Francisco. Two girls were found murdered in the belfry of a church. The last man seen with them was a negro, and the public immediately pointed the finger of suspicion toward him. One man swore that he saw Durant pawn one of the girls' rings. Another swore to this and that, and they patched up a network of little circumstances. The public was so inflamed against him that the women threatened him on the way to court, and nearly every morning before the trial commenced they had to cleanse him and the people's guards from him from the refuse. The jury heard the clamor of the public and convicted him. A weak judge, the weakest of whom I have ever been in the presence, to death in three days. They carried this case up on a writ of error, and won. On the new trial he was convicted again. And they hanged him. There is not a public cemetery in San Francisco where they would let this man's body be interred, and in the church where the crime occurred the preacher, on every Sunday, even after the man had been convicted, preached about it. And the jurors went there and the judge went his way, while the flowers grew over this man's grave.

"This is the fact, gentlemen, that has led to the abolition of capital punishment in many states on the Pacific coast. Five years after Durant had died on the gallows the pastor of the church was dying. He called a number of people around him and said, 'I cannot die without telling this horrible thing. I killed the two girls for whom Durant died.'

"I recall another case, one in England. A man named Wainwright murdered. They never even found his body. He had an old lady housekeeper who had two sons who worked in the house. And, strange to say, one of the sons testified that he knew something about the murder. The court hanged them all, and in another Dr. Hanson appeared in life, jaunty.

"I am citing these instances just to show how careful the law is and how careful it must be. People may say, like Dale Kenlaw, that the jury's verdict should be on the defendant. But these cases prove that it must not be.

"I remember the case that is worse than all of these. It is that of Dreyfus, who was a Jew and a lieutenant in the French army. Somebody had been selling plans of a fortress to the Germans, or it was thought somebody had. He was arrested, and the young officers who particularly hated a Jew, him off down to South Africa, to Devil's Island, in exile. Now, gentlemen, always in the end public opinion shifts around. The public gets to thinking 'Did we do right?' Soon after that man Dreyfus had been exiled, one man confessed and then another, and one of the worst conspiracies that ever has blotted civilization was disclosed. The French government, although they hesitated to do it, had to pardon Dreyfus and bring him back. The guilty men were convicted. There is the strange thing, gentlemen, that nearly every one was on that Dreyfus jury afterward committed suicide. That was jew persecution.

"It reminds me of Shakespeare's description of man." Mr Arnold quoted it, beginning "What a piece of work is man."

"Gentlemen, the murder of that little girl is little worse than the venom of this prosecution. We have been up against unspeakable things in this case. I'm coming to them in a few minutes. This little girl—God knows I sympathize with her parents as much as any man living!—was good and pure. But her parents, they don't seem bitter. They want the law to take its course. They don't know what is behind it.

TAKES DIG AT HOOPER.

"One thing my friend Hooper said caught my attention. What Hooper doesn't know about this case would fill a book. He has got just a little smattering of the evidence. He started to quote Conley in his argument, instead of quoting from the evidence, he quoted from Conley's third and fourth statements. But you can't blame him much for that. It makes one think of the story of the farmer who told his boy to plow a field. He gave the boy the plow point horse, and told him to drive a straight furrow. He said, "Do you see that bull away over there? You head right at him and don't you quit. drive a straight furrow." The farmer went away, and when he came back the bull had moved all around the place and the boy was still driving him. My friend Hooper reminds me of that boy following the bull. He didn't know which end to drive. Every time he was following. There are five of them, and if he testified any more there'd be six.

"My friend Hooper says that if Frank didn't kill the little girl, he ought to have protected her from Jim Conley. He said it would have been impossible for Conley to have dragged her body to that elevator and then taken it into the basement. He said Frank would have heard it, and it was Frank's duty to protect the little girl. Did you ever hear such a feeble theory? It's as weak as his other theories of his case. If Conley had killed that girl in the metal room, do you suppose he would allow Frank to come down there with Frank sitting in the office? All he had to do was wait until 1 o'clock, when Frank would be gone.

NOT IN METAL ROOM.

"But I'm going to show you that there's very little likelihood of that girl having been killed in the metal room. There is no evidence that she was, except what this man Barrett found. And I'm going to deal with him in a few minutes. Conley had twice as much chance to kill her as Frank. My friend Hooper smelled a plot. He said that Frank knew when this little girl Friday afternoon. Now I agree with everybody that the brute that killed her knew that she would not keep this appointment. The crime smacks of connubialism. But the state wants to get up a plot. And here's the way their plot begins:

CASE DEPENDS ON CONLEY'S STORY

He picked up a transcript of a portion of Conley's testimony. "If they've got any case against this man," he remarked, "it is Conley's evidence. Their case lives or fails with him. They say that on Friday Frank came down and was going to make some kind of assault on Mary Phagan the next day. Is that so, Frankie? Was that your idea?

Continuing with his ridicule of Attorney Hooper's plot, Mr. Arnold said:

"They say that Frank knew on Friday that he was going to attack Mary Phagan, or make advances toward her on Saturday. Now all they've got to support the theory that Frank knew the Phagan girl at all is the testimony of that poor little Turner boy. All he said was that Frank told Mary Phagan that he was the superintendent of the factory. He admitted that he only worked at the factory ten days, that he didn't know another girl in the factory, that he didn't know another man in the factory, and when they asked him to describe Mary all he could say was that she had light hair.

"Then they put up other witnesses—those two girls—who swore that months before the incident, that Turner swore about, they heard Frank calling her Mary. Why those two things don't fit! If he knew her well enough to call her Mary several months previous to that time, why should he be telling her when Turner saw him that he was the superintendent of the factory?"

CONLEY BUILT STORY TO FIT.

"Jim begins to lay the foundation of a plot on Friday. Let's see what sort of a plot it is. Remember, now, that Jim's story was made to fit every known circumstance of the case. As detective Scott himself admitted, if Conley's story didn't fit today they would tell him so and tomorrow it would fit.

"Now, gentlemen, I'm going to read to you a part of Conley's testimony. And it forms one of the most disgraceful chapters in criminal history."

Mr. Arnold then read from the testimony where Conley swore it was about 3 o'clock Friday afternoon when Frank told him to come back the next day.

"Now this was where they undertake to show that Frank had an engagement with some woman for Saturday. What woman do they mean? They have made no pretense of bringing any other woman into this case. Do they mean that he had an engagement with Mary Phagan. Why they don't even claim that themselves. Just as everybody knows, Mary Phagan was an honest, sweet, pure little girl.

"Now, who on earth would know at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon that she was coming to the factory on Saturday morning? The other help were all being paid off Friday afternoon. They don't claim that Mary Phagan sent any word to Frank that she wouldn't be there to get her pay until Saturday morning. Gentlemen, have we lost our senses? Are we stark naked idiots?

"But they've got to show a plot, so they get the little Ferguson girl to swear that she went to the factory Friday afternoon and asked Frank for Mary Phagan's pay envelope. You will notice now that this good woman, Mary's mother, didn't say anything about the Ferguson girl. According to Conley, remember, it was 3 o'clock Friday afternoon when Frank told him to come back Saturday morning. Now even admitting, just for the sake of argument, that the little Ferguson girl did ask Frank for Mary's money, how in the name of common sense was Frank to know at 3 o'clock what the little Ferguson girl was going to do?

"Frank didn't do the paying off. Schiff paid off at a window on the outside of both offices, built especially for that purpose. Anybody with sense enough to get their own money would naturally ask Schiff for somebody else's money. Then on top of that we had little Magnolia Kennedy, just as honest looking as the little Ferguson girl, who swore that she had her hand on the little Ferguson girl's shoulder when the Ferguson girl was paid off, and that she did not ask anybody for Mary Phagan's pay envelope.

PLOT TOO THIN.

"Gentlemen, their plot is too thin. It's too thin.

"Then my friend Hooper brings in Gantt. In the first place, Gantt doesn't come into this case in a very favorable light. Do you think Frank would have discharged him if that $1 had been the only shortage? But I'll not throw mud on Gantt because that's not the way we are handling this case. Why the theory that Frank discharged Gantt because he saw that Gantt was perhaps in good favor with the little Phagan girl, is ridiculous. It happened two weeks before the murder. What reason is there to believe that Gantt knew Mary so well anyhow? About the only reason they gave is that Gantt and Mary both came from Cobb county.

"Now there are 20,000 people in Cobb county. We showed by the little Hix girl, who worked there on the second floor in the same department with Mary Phagan, that she didn't know her herself. Then why should it be assumed that Gantt was so well asquainted with her? He wasn't her guardian.

FACTORY LIKE ALL OTHERS.

"Next my friend Hooper says there was something wrong going on down there at the factory. He's got no particular reason for saying so. Just says that because they worked 100 girls down there, and because Frank, a man, was the superintendent, and because Darley, the foreman, was a man, there must have been something wrong. Now I'll venture to say that that factory was no better and no worse than any other factory of about that size in the city of Atlanta. They worked about 100 girls down there, and about 50 girls would drift in and out during the course of a year. Now you know yourselves that out of that number of girls it would not be surprising to find some who were not exactly everything they should be. And some men who are not exactly everything they should be.

"But after all of their microscopic investigation extending back over a period of five years, during which investigation they went to every single man employe they could find, what facts have they developed? They've found a few floating employes who come up here and testify that Frank's character was bad. Now they could have told these girls enough to convict Caesar if asked them any questions to convince them that Frank had a powerful bad reputation. And I've no doubt they did, judging by the way they've gotten some other evidence.

DON'T CLAIM PERFECTION.

"But we're not claiming, gentlemen, perfection for this defendant any more than we claim it for ourselves or than you claim it for yourselves; and no more than Mr. Dorsey and his associates should claim it for themselves. Let the man who is innocent cast the first stone. We are not trying this man on everything that may have been said about him. We are trying him for murder.

"The worst thing, when you boil it all down, was that little dressing room incident, and what did it amount to? There was no bath in the dressing room, no toilet, and it was used by the girls only to change their top dresses. The girls themselves admit that there had been flirting in that room. And they admitted that Frank had tried to put a stop to it. The Leo Jackson girl let the cat out of the bag, gentlemen, when she said that they were afraid of Frank and got out of that dressing room and went to work just as soon as he came around there.

"And gentlemen, isn't that exactly the way you would expect the superintendent of a big factory to conduct himself? If he had started something with the girls in that factory don't you know that demoralization would have reigned in the whole place? Don't you know that he couldn't have gotten any work out of the girls? Don't you know that he would have made a failure as superintendent and that Mr. Montag would have fired him?

WOULDN'T TRUST A PRUDE.

"And what did it amount to if he did put his hand on the shoulder of this little 13-year-old Phagan girl? Why, you can go out here to Piedmont park any Sunday afternoon and see 500 girls and boys with hardly anything on; and the boys are grabbing them by the arms and legs and are pitching them all around there, and are having a good time. And I don't mean to say by that I think the world is going to the dogs, either. It's a sign that we are getting more broad-minded, that we are learning some sense about these matters. And let me tell you something, gentlemen of the jury, deliver me from one of these prudish fellows that never looks at a girl and never puts his hands on her and is always talking about his own virtue. He's the kind that I wouldn't trust behind the door.

"Let them have the dressing room incident for all it is worth. Does it mean anything? Wasn't everything done openly and above board, and in broad daylight? My friend Hooper would have you believe that every bush has a bear behind it.

"And now this Conley says that Frank told him Friday afternoon to come back the next day. Did Frank know that the office would be full of people all day? Did he see Holloway when he first came in, and did he see Lemmie Quinn and Emma Freeman and all the others? Why did he know that this little child was coming to the factory? How did he think that he was to have anything to do with her? She had given him no encouragement. Why it is foolish to think that he told Conley to come back because he was planning a crime.

"A RELENTLESS PURSUIT.

"But my friends had started after Frank and they have relentlessly pursued him.

"Now I will take up the man I call Christopher Columbus Barrett. Don't you know that the testimony shows that on Sunday Chief Beavers, Chief Lanford and Starnes, Frank, Darley, went through that very metal room looking for clues? Do you think they would have overlooked such a thing as that blood?"

The solicitor interrupted to state that the evidence did not show that Starnes had gone through there. Mr. Dorsey said that he had not corrected many misstatements by Mr. Arnold, but wanted to correct this one.

Mr. Arnold said he still thought the evidence showed Starnes went through there, but told an associate to consult the record about it, and continued his speech.

"At any rate, those men and God knows how many others went through there Sunday and found nothing. Yet the next Monday morning that fellow Barrett started out on his cruise of discovery. This fellow who has been working for the Pinkerton agency and for common sense was Frank to know at 3 o'clock what the little Ferguson girl was going to do?

Anybody with sense enough to get their own money would naturally ask Schiff for somebody else's money. do. They say his testimony must be true because he couldn't have invented the details. In the first statement there are a dozen details about getting up and shaving, craps and drinking in Peters street saloons, just as plausible as the details of his fifth sworn statement on the stand here." Attorney Arnold turned to the statement and picked out each falsehood that Conley had admitted uttering.

"There is nothing wonderful about what he has told you, when you realize the lies that he has told and that he can tell." Mr. Arnold read Conley's statement on the stand here in which the negro admitted writing the notes.

"If there is a word that the negro knows how to spell it is 'negro.' In Conley's statement on the stand here he took occasion to say 'negro' every five minutes, and yet in this note, when he's telling about this stock writing it, he says he spelled it wrong.

"About this confession. You see he had to make some explanation for writing the notes. He was telling a story and he was lying. Yet he didn't tell the whole truth then—not the alleged truth that he has uttered here. There was no reason why he shouldn't, though, for he had gone back on him, and he had decided to go back on Frank, he said. And when he decided to confess, then they themselves had a gold mine to work on.

"If they had left Conley in that jail with Uncle Wheeler Mangum here he'd have told it in the first confession. He would not join in the hunt. Then he wouldn't be biased. I can remember my old friend Dorsey and what a great memory he had. I can imagine somebody coming to him and saying: 'Let's take the car down to police headquarters. I'm afraid he'll talk.' I can imagine him saying: 'Leave him there with Uncle Wheeler Mangum, and let him talk to whomever he wants.'

"But where Dorsey's gone into the thing with 'em, he can't weigh the evidence against Frank. He's convicted the chief himself. The solicitor ought to be nearly as fair as the judge, because he's got the power of the state behind him.

A RIDICULOUS FARCE.

"So they went to the judge and asked for and obtained the order admitting him to bail. The judge said, 'All right, I've got nothing to do with your quarrel,' so he released him. Then they turned him loose and went through the ridiculous farce of re-arresting him just outside the door. And yet all of that stamps with the utmost falsity as much evidence to indict Conley as they did to indict Frank. The negro had a vastly better opportunity to commit the crime than Frank did. He admits himself he was hiding down there on the first floor that night, and he knew the elevator shaft. He's just the type of negro to commit a crime like that, with a long criminal record behind him.

HOW THEY GET EVIDENCE.

"Now, gentlemen, I'm going to give you a sample of how to get evidence. They say Conley couldn't have invented so many details if he hadn't been telling the truth. Why, here's four pages of nothing but details, and now he says every word of it's a lie. I'm not going to read it to you, even.

"We come to Conley's third statement and find that Jim for the first time changes the time of writing those notes from Friday to Saturday. Again he tells two long typewritten pages of detail about what he did that morning. Now he says all that was a lie, too. He admits here that he first said he did the writing on Friday so as not to be connected with the crime. He says he made it freely and voluntarily, after thinking over the whole situation, without fear of punishment or hope of reward.

"He denies here that he went to the pencil factory that morning. Ah! Why? He knew what he had done. Through all of these statements he kept away off from the factory. He approached it warily. And why was he kept away? By the guilty memory of having lurked there by the stairway on the first floor, his passions inflamed by the beer he had drunk, watching every girl so closely that he comes here and testifies on the stand exactly what kind of dresses they had on and how their shoes looked. Ah, gentlemen, the miserable lying wretch had guilt on his soul!

"When finally he admitted being in the factory, he tried to fix it up by saying he was there to watch for Frank. And what a fine watchman he was! According to his own story, two minutes after hearing the girl go back to the metal room and hearing Frank follow her and hearing her scream, he opened the door and let Monteen Stover go up stairs. Why, gentlemen, it fatigues my indignation to suppose that such splendid citizens as yourselves would believe this negro's story for a moment.

HOW A NEGRO CAN LIE.

"And yet they say that a negro can't lie as to details. Why, can any friend Charley Hill used to say, if you put a nigger in a hopper, he'll drip lies. His whole intelligence trends in that direction. I'm not going to read you all this. There are too many details here.

"You may think it peculiar that the negro should think of claiming that Frank put him in the wardrobe. Why, he knew every foot of that factory. He'd been working there two years. Bear in mind, now, that the two women he claims came in about that time—Miss Emma Clark and Miss Corinthia Hall, according to their testimony, corroborated by the testimony of other witnesses, came to the factory 30 minutes before Conley says they were there.

"Now you notice that on the stand he changes to Miss Emma Clark and Miss Corinthia Freeman. That's another place where his story wouldn't fit and the detectives had him change it.

"That story about hiding in the wardrobe is the most ridiculous thing in the world, anyhow? Suppose he had been in it, and suppose Frank had killed the girl, couldn't Frank have gone outside of his office when he heard the girls leave and shut his doors behind him? Frank was the superintendent of the factory, and he could have done that without arousing any suspicion at all. Even supposing that the girls had come back and seen him in Frank's office, there wouldn't have been anything wrong in that. Conley worked there, and they knew him, and they'd seen him around the factory every day.

"Then his story about watching there in the first floor, from June till January; that's another ridiculous thing. In June till January the Clark Woodenware company occupied half of the first floor, and used the same front entrance that the pencil factory used. Frank wouldn't have had any right to lock the door and shut them out.

"Now here he says that Frank asked him, 'Jim, can you write?' That was a beautiful question, wasn't it? He testified on the stand that he'd been writing for Frank two years.

"My friend Hooper says how foolish it would have been for Jim to have written the notes of his own accord. Well, if it was foolish for Conley, how much more foolish would it have been for Frank, a northern man, to attempt to dictate a note that sounded like a negro's writing?

Attorney Arnold proceeded to ridicule other minor details of Conley's affidavit, and did it so effectively that several members of the jury and the spectators laughing.

Mr. Arnold reached the statement attributed to Frank by Conley, in which the statement: "Why should I hang? I have wealthy relatives in Brooklyn."

CONLEY'S STORY TOLD AGAIN.

"For weeks," said Mr. Arnold, "the papers had been saying that Frank was from Brooklyn, and at that time every boob thought that he had wealthy people there, and this Conley had been literally eating up the papers at every possible opportunity. That was a fatal slip he made. He has no wealthy relatives in Brooklyn. His father, a hopeless invalid, has an insignificant little job there. His uncle has a little cigar store and his aunt works in New York for a living. Do you reckon a white man ever would have made any such statement as that? Do you reckon he would have broken loose and yelped like a dog?

"You notice that he said, 'I think.' I'm just showing how absurd it is. Remember, at the time Conley said this they had taken Frank away from Uncle Wheeler and had him in police headquarters again. I believe if he had stayed in the jail he would have confessed. But the police station he didn't have a chance to confess. Every time he would start out in that direction they would turn it back toward Frank.

Mr. Arnold read Conley's statement that Frank asked "Where is Snowball?"

"Where is Snowball?" repeated Mr. Arnold. "In his last extremity he calls for Snowball. 'Give me Snowball or give me death!'

"Then Frank had him write this note saying: 'He laid down and told me he would love me.' And then Frank told him he was going to recommend Conley for a position, and send that letter to his mother in Brooklyn for the purpose of getting him a job there. In Brooklyn, where the negro never had said he wanted to work. Do you think a white man would write that? He was going to send this letter to his mother? Has reason fled? Have men lost their wits? Is this the time to polish up the handle of the pencil, unless you swallow every word that Jim Conley said even before he opened his mouth to swallow it, guts, feathers and all."

"Then Jim jumps off right and quick and says, 'I didn't write another line on that watch.' He always was trying to get out of paying something. And Frank answered, 'I don't see what you wanted to get the watch for.' That big fat wife of mine wants me to get her an automobile, but I wouldn't do it. Does Jim Conley say that Frank told that about his wife? Conley had been working there for years. Mrs. Frank had been down there often. Why, she knew she was a stout lady. That statement is nearly as unkind as their trying to indict Frank because he wouldn't go to the jail to see her husband.

WHY MRS. FRANK STAYED AWAY.

"And Frank says that he begged her to stay away because he didn't want her to see him a prisoner; because he didn't want the newspapers to snapshot her. Yet she wanted to go and stay in jail with him, and she would have if they had let her, for she is a devoted woman of a devoted kind.

"It is awful how they invaded his home, and tried to impugn the motives of his wife, tried to get servants to lie about him. That, gentlemen, is hitting below the belt. We are an honorable, people, a chivalric people, and I deny that the men who have done these things represent 175,000 people of Atlanta or the good people of the state of Georgia. I deny that they even represent a prosecution. They only represent a persecution.

Mr. Arnold read from the Conley affidavit again.

"That is where he put it down on Saturday, but denied any knowledge of the murder. But that didn't satisfy these gentlemen, so they went at him again. There never has been a negro so guarded and so protected on this earth from becoming a principal in a crime.

"Let us read some from the evidence of Scott, who was helping Conley make these statements." I found out that Conley could write at the factory on May 18, and I went and dictated one of the notes to him and it took him six or seven minutes to write it. Later when Mrs. White came to look at him and twelve other negroes he chewed his lips and seemed excited when he saw her. We tried to get a confession from him, and used a little profanity, but he looked us in the face and said he was telling the truth.

"Mr. Hooper seems to think that we have to break him on the stand, or believe him. But this man Scott admits that Conley could lie and look him straight in the face. It all goes to show that you can't pretend to believe him.

"And we carried him to Mr. Dorsey's office. Ah! That's where my friend got in it!

"And he said he was telling the whole truth.'"

Mr. Arnold read a statement saying that Conley claimed to have met Frank at Forsyth and Nelson streets.

"That is the biggest piece of foolishness on earth. And he merely stuck to that on the stand because it was a remnant of his first lie, which he sticks to by tradition. Scott says that they saw him on May 27th in Lanford's office, and tried to impress on him the fact that Frank wouldn't write the notes on Friday; that it wouldn't fit; that it showed premeditation. And then they told him they wanted another statement. And he said he had told them the whole truth. But the next day, says Scott, he and Lanford went to Conley again, and then he put it on Saturday, swearing that this was the last and the truthful statement. Is that shows how these statements were made to fit."

KNOWS A LOT ABOUT LAW.

"Then on the 29th they got him to tell about the body. Now here is a most singular thing in that statement. He said Frank had told him that the girl had fallen. Conley didn't say anything about the cord on her neck.

"That's an intelligent negro. He knows a lot about law. Because if he had said the cord was around her neck, he would have admitted that he knew the girl was murdered, and he would be indicted as an accessory after the fact.

"Now hemmed in and protected against indictment, he made these confessions. It was the slickest thing I ever heard of. There's probably nothing else like it in the world. Is that fair play? Is that justice? When he made this, they had taken him away from Uncle Wheeler Mangum and Newport and Starnes and Scott and Black had him. And the coaching and sweating that they gave him!

"They didn't tell him what to swear, but they gave him some broad hints, what not to swear. He said he didn't know about the murder. Isn't he intelligent, gentlemen? He didn't want to be an accessory after the fact. This was a monstrous scheme, gentlemen, a monstrous chain of accidents. The tracks are as big as those of an elephant, and as plain. I don't claim credit for showing this up. It's as evident as that house over there.

ANOTHER REVELATION.

"And when we came to court, gentlemen, this statement of the 29th is what we expected to answer. But since he made that he has had another revelation. He says 'Mr. Dorsey has seen me seven times. The detectives have held nightly seances with me. So I know a lot more about this than I did then.' I don't doubt that the detectives and my Irish friend, Patrick Campbell, over there, didn't help him out in finding out a lot more about this.

"I say, gentlemen, does he tell a thing because it's the truth? Or does he tell it because he was told to? He admits that every time the detectives and Dorsey saw him he changed and added to his story. Are you going to hang a man on that? Are you going to hang a man upon that? We all are, we're all flesh and blood. What has the world come to, if I've got to argue that point?

"If we hang a man on a story like that, we are no worse than grub-worms. I am glad to espouse this man and fight for his cause. I know that the public eventually will commend me for it. And I know that my own conscience will commend me.

"Conley admits he was right there behind the elevator when that little girl came into that factory. And he was there when she came down. It took but two steps to get that mesh bag. Probably his aim was highway robbery. Here was a drunken, degraded fiend up for money. The little girl probably held to it when he grabbed it. He struck her in the eye and she fell. It is but the work of one moment, gentlemen, to push her into that elevator shaft.

"And isn't that more plausible than this ridiculous statement that he has made against Frank? Suppose the condition was reversed. Suppose Conley was indicted, not Frank. Would you believe this wierd tale one minute? We come here to answer this statement made on May 29, and not all the rest of this that he has conjured up since that time."

"MEANS A LOT TO THAT MAN."

"I want you to pardon me, gentlemen, for taking up so much time. It's a hardship for you and it's torture to me. But it means a whole lot to that man sitting over there."

He read a portion of Conley's testimony in which Conley said Mr. Dorsey visited him several times and talked to each of these points he had given more detail. He read this question and answer: "Q. As you went along you would have some additions to make? Why didn't you tell it all at once? A. I didn't want to tell it all. I wanted to hold enough back."

"Every one of these seven times he added to this story, every one of these seven times when Starnes and Campbell and Dorsey questioned him. Let us see what he added. In the first statement he said he didn't see Mary. Now he says he saw her. In this statement he didn't say he saw Monteen Stover. Now he says he saw her. What a revelation! What a chapter is his! What coaching he had!

MIMICS CONVERSATIONS.

"Jim, how, could you possibly have missed hearing that little girl go back to that metal room?' 'Yes, boss, I did hear her. She did go back.' 'Now, Conley, didn't you hear Frank go back, too?' 'Well, to tell the truth, boss I guess I did.' 'Conley, didn't you hear Frank come tiptoeing back out after a little while? Tell us, now, whether you did or not.' 'Yes, sir, I guess so.' 'Now, Conley, we've got a theory that that man who have done these things—and for him before?' 'Yes, boss, I guess I have.'

"Gentlemen, those rumors were started at the beginning of this investigation, and he shaped his statement accordingly. Why the law doesn't allow me to lead a witness on the stand. But God knows what happens to them before they get in before old Judge Roan there! God knows how they're coerced and advised and sweated and cursed before they get here.

"'Conley, there was a man named Dalton who went into that factory. Didn't you ever see him?' 'Yes, sir, I guess I seen him.' 'Now, Conley, there was a tall woman who went in there. Her name was Daisy Hopkins. Did you see her?' 'Yes, sir, I reckon I saw her, too.' 'Now, Conley, you saw 'em go in there together, didn't you?' 'Yes, sir, they went in there together, I reckon.' 'They went into the basement, didn't they? Down through that scuttle hole and back to that bunk?' 'Yes, sir, I saw 'em go back there.'

HOW CASE WAS BUILT.

"That's the kind of evidence this case is built on. Why there was a witness in here who said he had looked at his watch, and his watch had been in the pawnshop since January. You don't suppose he had half a dozen watches, do you? They'd all have been in the pawnshop.

"And then there was that mesh bag. Bless your heart, they've over looked that! My friend Dorsey never thought of it till just before the trial. And then he went to Conley and asked him what became of the mesh bag. And Conley said that Frank put it in the safe. That was the crowning lie of all. Bless your heart, Conley knows where that mesh bag is.

"He stole it from that girl, and then pushed her down that elevator shaft and ravished her afterward. It's a nigger crime, gentlemen; it's a nigger crime. He never did tell about that pay envelope. He didn't tell about it because he stole it. That's why.

MADE CHANGES TO FIT FACTS.

"Scott tells how all these changes came about. When did he add all these things to his statements. He added them as fast as the state found out the facts.

"What was their object in taking Conley away from the jail, except to get him to change his statement? According to Harllee Branch's testimony it took Conley fifty minutes to re-enact the story. He said that according to Dr. Owens, it took him and his party thirty-four and a half minutes, leaving out the six or eight minutes required to write the notes and the eight minutes which Conley claims he spent in the wardrobe. Now, said Mr. Arnold, coming to this part of the case—leaving out your rotten slanders, leaving out your vile charges of perversion, leaving out the testimony of these little girls who were dragged here and made to testify against Frank's character, leaving that all out, I am going to show you that the state's case cannot be true.

MISS STOVER CAME AFTER MARY.

Mr. Arnold then ran down the chart, reading each item as he went. At the item indicating 12:02 o'clock he paused to ridicule Solicitor Dorsey for what he termed the solicitor's desperate attempt to show that the time clock was wrong.

"Between 12:05 and 12:10," said Mr. Arnold, indicating this item on the chart," little Monteen Stover arrived and little Mary Phagan did not get there before she did. Jim Conley and all the balance of you to the contrary notwithstanding.

"Now if George Epps, the state's own witness, was telling the truth Monteen Stover was obliged to have gotten there ahead of Mary Phagan.

"Gentlemen, I am hanging around that point like Grant around Richmond. Away with your miserable lies about perversion, away with your mangy street gossip, away with your Jew-lynching witnesses, away with your third degree testimony, away with your trumped up evidence. If you are fair men, let's get down to the facts in this case and stick to them.

"WE MUST STICK TO FACTS."

"The witness that Dorsey puts up shows that she couldn't have gotten to the factory before 12:10 or 12:11. We must stick to the facts in the case. I don't believe that little Miss Monteen Stover told an untruth. I don't believe that she got no farther than the outer office; that the safe door was open, and that she couldn't see Frank sitting at the desk.

"But suppose he was not in the office, what difference does it make?

"Dorsey would stop the natural functions of the body; he would set clocks back; he would put street cars ahead of schedule; and like Joshua, he would make the sun stand still. But the facts show that they never could have connected Frank with the crime if they had not told them that the girl was there. He didn't imagine then that there was enough prejudice against his race for them to try to convict him.

"Suppose that he was eaten up by lust—which is a miserable slander. Why should he ever have killed the girl? Why should a white man commit such a crime.

"But take that negro. There are a thousand negroes in Atlanta who would kill you for 50 cents, and a thousand others who would ravish a woman if they thought they would not be caught.

"Yet you tell me it is unreasonable to suppose that this wild, black, hungry, lustful wretch would not seize the opportunity to snatch at this girl's purse, to drag her down into the basement, and there maybe accomplish another hellish wrong?"

Mr. Arnold pointed to the time chart which he had brought into court.

"The sworn evidence gives him only eight minutes between the time the girl came to the factory and the time Quinn came. Could he have attacked her? Could he have put that rope around her neck? Could he have assaulted her? And then been back at his desk, a normal man, digging into his work, a normal man, in eight minutes? And he didn't have a scratch on him. The police examined him.

WHY HE WENT TO FOURTH FLOOR.

"Why did he go up to the fourth floor, my friends ask. Gentlemen, they would insist on that. What would be more natural? He didn't want to lock the woman in, and he thought probably the boys would want to go out to dinner. And yet he couldn't leave the factory doors open, with his office there unguarded. And then, when Mrs. White had left, do you think he would have called this negro and gone about the disposal of the body with those two boys on the fourth floor? Do you think he would run the elevator when he knew they could hear the motor hum? Do you think he would have done this, knowing every minute he was liable to be caught?

"Now, I come to a point which makes as clear as the Holy Writ the fact that Conley was lying. Conley says Frank left the factory about 1:30. Frank says he left at 1. Conley says he called him at 4 minutes to 1, and all these estimates show that these things couldn't have been done in less than 34 minutes. Now, gentleman, we have a girl, an unimpeachable witness, a pure, sweet little lad who was standing at Jacobs' at 1:10; and she saw Frank there then.

"How are you going to get around that? Did she lie? Dorsey doesn't claim that she did. That little girl had an engagement with another girl at 1:15 and she looked at the Davis and Freeman clock at 1:05. What could be more reasonable? She went right straight to the corner. She didn't think it necessary that she should have taken her a minute. But the little soul is liberal, and she says she saw Frank certainly not later than 1:10, that stamps Jim Conley as a liar fit only for the lower regions.

"And didn't Mr. Levy see him at 1:20 as he got off of the car? She is no relative of Frank's. It is true that she's a Jew. But she was telling the truth.

Mr. Arnold quoted from Tennyson about "kind hearts are better than coronets."

"Mr. and Mrs. Selig saw him a minute later. My friend Dorsey would have you believe that because they are the father-in-law and mother-in-law of Frank that they are liars and that only Jim Conley and Dalton always tell the truth. God knows, it fatigues my indignation to have to argue this case.

AS TO ALBERT MCKNIGHT.

"And now we come to Albert McKnight, another great liar, an interstate liar, almost an international liar, but the state's own witness, gentlemen. He says he saw Frank come home at 11:30, when Conley, that other great liar, says he was at the factory.

Albert reached the climax in his lying when he undertook to frame, after a nervous 10 minutes at home, got on the car at Georgia avenue and Pulliam street, when Jerome Michael and Mrs. Michael and many other good people saw him get on the car at Gloan and Washington, and Mr. Hinchey saw him on the Washington street car when it reached the capitol.

"Let me dwell for a minute on Albert McKnight and his wife. How would you feel if you were charged with a crime, and your cook knew nothing about it. And yet without rhyme or reason or warrant of law, and after the solicitor already had her truthful affidavit—Starnes, I like you, but I wouldn't have thought that you would do this thing. Gentlemen, he had no charge against the woman, and no right to arrest her. But he was an officer, and had power behind him. Craven and Fickett, two men trying to get a part of the reward, helped him. And they said to Mrs. McKnight, 'You don't you agree with your husband?' when they locked her up.

"I don't believe that they would have done this thing to you or to any other white citizen. But the fact remains that she was locked up until she made her affidavit, although she had already made a statement to the solicitor, which was just the same as the statement she made on the witness stand before you. This, gentlemen, is the way they get their evidence. Starnes was guilty of a crime; Dorsey, if he had anything to do with it, was guilty of a crime. George Gordon says that he went to Dorsey and asked Dorsey to release her and Dorsey said that he was afraid he would get in bad with the detectives.

DORSEY UP IN AIR.

"My friend has gone up into the air with this case, and he needs to be brought back to earth.

"I now reach the incident about Miss Rebecca Carson, the dirtiest slander in this whole case. Here she is, a girl, working as a forewoman, with her mother and her little sister. Would she, in broad daylight, right near her mother and near her sister, have gone into a room with a man for an immoral purpose? Yet they have forced poor little girls to come here and swear that she did.

"Now we come to 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when Frank reached the factory. Do you suppose that any man who had committed the crime that they claim Frank did, could possibly have done the work that he did? When he was so nervous the next morning, don't you suppose that he would have been nervous that night and that afternoon. Hooper gets mad because Frank tried to joke that night. Don't you see they won't let him do anything?

"Next morning, they say, he was nervous. Of course he was. You would have been nervous and so would I, if without having any breakfast we had been rushed into a room and shown that corpse. It always makes me nervous to look at a corpse.

THE TWIN P'S

"I have about finished, gentlemen. There are only two things about this case prejudice and perjury the twin p's.

"Never has there been such malice displayed in the prosecution of any case. The crime was horrible. God grant that its perpetrator may be punished and I think that we can prove that Jim Conley is the man who should receive the punishment. Let us follow the law and not follow prejudice. Frank's alibi is complete, and Jim Conley has been proven a liar. This whole case is a fabrication, a frame-up pure and simple.

"Gentlemen, write a verdict of not guilty, and your consciences will be clear."

Mr. Arnold's speech concluded with these words at 5:50 o'clock, and court adjourned immediately until 9 o'clock Friday morning.

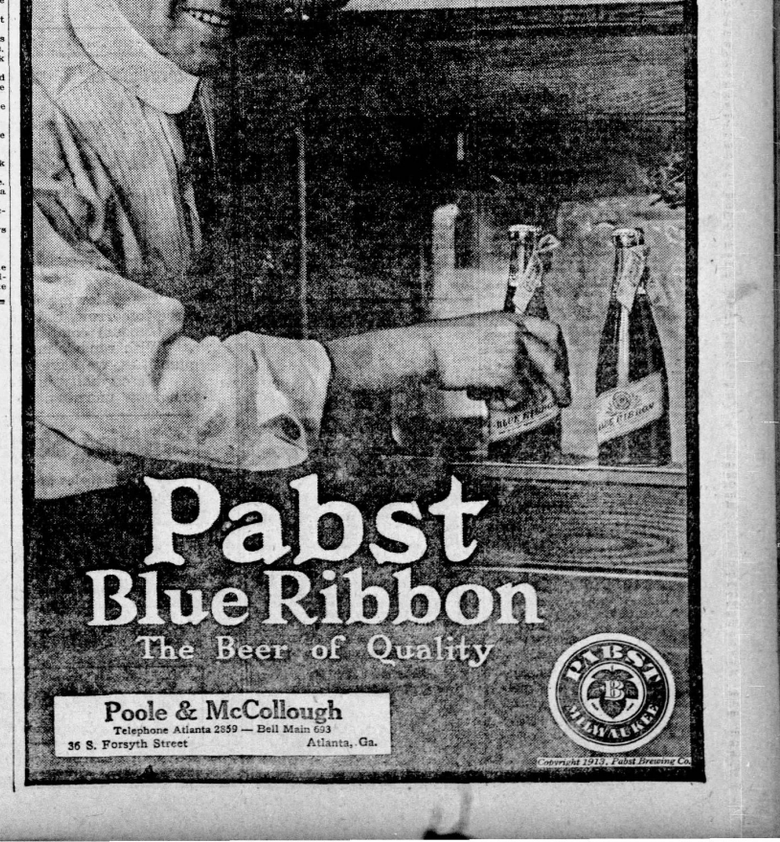
NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY



News of Women and Society

To Miss Irwin

Mrs. William Jenkins will entertain at bridge Tuesday afternoon in compliment to her guest, Miss Irma Irwin, of Montgomery.

To Miss Honour

An enjoyable event of this evening will be the picnic given at Grant park in honor of Miss Gresham, who is visiting her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Gresham, and Miss Nell Honour, of Greenville, S. C., who is visiting her cousin, Miss Anneta Honour.

A series of parties are being planned for them during their visit. Among those entertaining the first of next week will be Miss Anneta Honour, who will entertain on Tuesday evening for the visiting girls at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Honour.

On Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Russell Gresham will entertain at bridge and a number of other entertainments are being planned.

In Honor of Miss Riser

Invited were Misses Mary and Lois Brittain, Miss Nelle Means, Miss Frances Fry, Miss Roselyn Vitter, Miss Evelyn Means and Miss Azalea Fry.

To Visitors

Miss Frances Springer's tea this afternoon was in compliment to a number of visiting girls: Miss Annie Will Pearce and Miss Irene Berry, of Columbus; Miss Sarah Garland, of Griffin, and Miss Ruth Small, of Macon.

The rooms were sunny with great clusters of golden glow filling tall stands and vases in all the rooms, ferns and palms making an effective setting for the flowers and groups of prettily gowned young women receiving and calling.

Yellow nasturtiums were used on the tea table, low bowls of the lovely blossoms and their green leaves alternating with candlesticks fitted with yellow silk shades, the sweets filling silver bonbon dishes also being in yellow tints.

Punch was served by Miss Charlsie McLain and Miss Emma Jordan, and others assisting in entertaining were Miss Carrie Parrish, Miss Theodosia Andrews, Miss Floyd and Miss Ruth Paden.

This evening Miss Springer will entertain the receiving party at bridge, inviting to meet them Mr. Drayne Jenkins, Mr. Dean Paden, Mr. Louis Pearson, Mr. Frank Taylor, Mr. Will Franklin, Mr. Gordon Freeman, Mr. Joe Teague, Mr. Will Ware and Mr. Howard Parrish.

Miss Lucile Bean will give a matinee party Monday afternoon in compliment to visitors.

Home Party

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Askew, of White Plains, have been entertaining a house party at their lovely little home for two weeks.

The guests are Miss Margaret Videtto, of Augusta; Miss Mary Russell, of Winder; Miss Margaret Colson, of Waynesboro; Miss Etta Colclough, of Penfield, and Mr. T. L. Silas, of Macon.

Several social functions have been given in their honor. They were joined for the week-end by Mr. R. R. Russell, Jr., Mr. John Carrington, Mr. Andrew Thomas, Mr. Theo Jackson and Mr. Allen Carrington, of Winder.

Mr. and Mrs. Askew entertained them very delightfully at a barbecue Thursday under the beautiful oaks in the yard. Those invited were Misses Louise and Mabel Sanders, Miss Irene Bradley, Misses Gladys, Hattie May and Nell Marchman, Miss Grace Anderson, Miss Margaret Videtto, Miss Mary Russell, Miss Margaret Colson, Miss Florence Rogers, Miss Julia Driscoll, Miss Gertrude Crutchfield, Miss Bert Howell, Miss Mary Thompson, Miss Marie King, Miss Maude Gober, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. H. AMERICAN FASHIONS

By Lillian Young.

Wraps, whether designed for traveling, evening wear, or motoring are all cut very much on the same general lines—loose, draped and knee length, with the cutaway effect in front achieved either by draping or a shaped, stitched-on band of self material. For motor coats and wraps the rough silks, such as rajahs and pongee, are always as good looking, cool and serviceable as any, and more dustproof than serges and the other silks.

An extremely smart motoring wrap of tan pongee, cut on the newest lines, is shown in today's sketch. Several odd and attractive features are introduced—notably three knotted cord fastenings, deep, faced cuffs and soft, rolled back collar. It is very baggy, with sleeves cut in one with the body part and the lower part of the coat draped up from the back and caught together in front under the square tab of the fastening. A heavy, dull blue cording, very much like that used on dressing gowns, is run around the neck, under the collar, with the ends pulled through two eyelets in the square tab fastening and knotted in front with the tasselled ends hanging loosely below. Smaller cording is used in the same way through the outside of the cuffs.

If desired, the collar cuffs and square tab at the fastening may be faced with white ratine or with some contrasting colored silk.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Henry T. Mayo entertained at a dinner last night on the roof of the Army and Navy club, in honor of the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Daniels. The other guests were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Howard, Dr. and Mrs. Dunbar, Mrs. Bagley, Mrs. Wing, Mrs. Stewart and Dr. DuBose.

An interesting engagement just announced is that of Mrs. Claire M. Wolseholme, of Philadelphia, and Mr. W. Newton Gulick, of this city. No date has been set for the wedding, but it is expected it will take place early in the autumn. Both Mrs. Wolseholme and Mr. Gulick are well known in Washington. Mrs. Wolseholme has spent two winters at the Dresden, where she had an apartment.

Mr. Gulick is a son of Mrs. Alexander F. Magruder. He is a member of the Metropolitan and Chevy Chase clubs. For several months Mr. Gulick has been living in Philadelphia, where he is engaged in business, making weekly trips to Washington. A brother of Mr. Gulick is Captain L. Mason Gulick, whose marriage to Miss Isabelle Clark, of Scranton, Pa., took place about three years ago.

Miss Burr was one of the prettiest debutantes last winter. Her father, I. Tucker Burr, a banker, gave her a gorgeous coming-out party. A brilliant social career was predicted for her. Suddenly she announced her determination of following the lead of a number of the Vincent club girls by becoming a nurse.

In preparation for her training at the Children's hospital, Miss Burr has spent the most of the early summer at the hospital on Children's island, Marblehead. To complete her course in traning it will be necessary for Miss Burr to spend three years in study of the theory and practice of nursing.

As London society would not do anything to make the last week of the season gay, the king and queen gave a court ball, and it has been much discussed ever since. It was intimated that when the queen danced no one else must take the floor, and as her majesty danced nearly every dance most of the guests stood gazing in amazement or loafing around, not knowing what to do. Some who did not comprehend the new etiquette joined in the dancing, but were taped with a golden wand of Major Crichton, one of the gentlemen ushers, and requested to desist.

But people could not be blamed for not understanding, for the very good reason that it is an old-fashioned rule revived.

Fairbanks-Stamper

A wedding of much interest was that of Miss Frances Susan Fairbanks and Mr. William Harrison Stamper, which took place on Thursday evening, August 14, at the home of the bride's parents on Simpson street. The wedding march was played by Miss Kathleen Rouse.

The house was artistically decorated. A quantity of pink roses and palms were used in the parlod, hall and dining room. During the evening ices were served.

The marriage is announced of Miss Lula May Shaw and Mr. Frank J. Baker, both of Atlanta, on November 28, 1912, in LaGrange, Ga.

Notable Mission Work Planned

The churchwomen of Atlanta are planning for a notable work among the different denominations in the mission study classes this fall. The Jubilee union, known as the Atlanta Union of Mission Workers, of which Mrs. H. N. Hurt is president, has secured the services of a distinguished leader of study classes, Dr. B. C. Millikin, of the Missionary Education Movement, whose headquarters are in New York. He will be remembered as one of the brilliant speakers and leaders at the recent Presbyterian general assembly held in Atlanta. Dr. Millikin will arrive on September 13 for a week's work with missionary leaders in the city. There will be two classes daily of two hours each formed of students who will teach mission study classes after their normal course under Dr. Millikin in the various churches of the city. The course will therefore be intensive and normal, in every sense a training class. Each class will have six sessions and will probably be limited to 25 members.

Those wishing to have the privilege of this course will communicate with their missionary leaders or the chairman of the mission study class of the Jubilee union. The sessions will probably be held at St. Luke's church. Announcement will be made later as to the expenses of the course, the hours of the classes and the limitation of numbers.

Dr. Millikin will meet groups of Sunday school officers and teachers on the two Sunday afternoons that he is here for practical suggestions for missionary education in the Sunday schools.

There will be a meeting of the vice presidents of the denominations on Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock at St. Luke's to perfect the details of the course. Dr. Millikin will be the guest of Mrs. Archibald Davis while here.

It is a matter of cordial congratulation that the church workers on mission lines in the city have planned for such systematic and efficient study and consequent extension of their work for the Christian's conquest of the world.

Stoves in Parks for Picnics

(New York Independent.)

For the benefit of Los Angeles picnickers the park authorities are placing different devices in the parks which make hot lunches possible. A cement stove with a grill on which meat may be broiled, coffee prepared, bread toasted or a dozen other different things heated without any danger of setting fire to dry grass, have been built. In one of the stoves a sink and drain board for washing dishes has been constructed, also of cement, which serves excellently people who have to carry their lunch baskets some distance from the street.

The cement stove also aids the park caretakers, for bits of paper can be destroyed or piled up for kindling for the next lot of picnickers who come along.

The Evening Story

Their Daughters

(Copyright, 1913, by W. Werner.)

The feud was silly. Each woman in her heart was ashamed of it. Ten years before Anna Beam and Belle Wiskins had met together in high school, got their lessons together, planned their graduation gowns from the same fashion plate, and agreed solemnly that when they were married they would live in houses side by side and raise their

Three years later they were married. They each had a baby girl a year old, and when they passed on the streets of the small city where they had grown up together Anna Jerrod's brilliant brown eyes snapped with something perilously like hate and Belle Tracy tilted her pretty white chin to an angle that expressed absolute scorn. And they did not speak.

Each had a pretty cottage—Anna in the north end of town, Belle in the south. Their husbands were casually civil, neither having any dislike for the other, but each debarred from making a friendly advance by his wife's attitude. Will Jerrod had been born in the town and grown up with the two girls. Everett Tracy had come in three years before to take charge of the two lumber yards. Will Jerrod was an architect.

Each man made a comfortable but not luxurious living. Anna knew that her parlor was furnished about the same style as Belle's. Belle knew that while her piano cost a hundred dollars more than Anna's, Anna had better rugs. They moved in the same set, but hostesses learned not to put them at the same card table.

"They don't speak, you know," Mrs. Gillett, wife of the bank cashier, explained wearily as for the seventh time she arranged the places at her dinner table so that neither Will nor Belle nor Anna nor Everett should be next or face the other.

"No one knows. And they won't tell."

Of course they wouldn't tell. Each was ashamed. The beginning had been so trivial. A rainy day when both felt dumpish and Anna was irritated because a dressmaker had spoiled a new dress, and Belle had been cross because her new shoes hurt her, and an ulcerated tooth shot pains, and the rain had drenched a maline toque. They were in Anna's bedroom.

"I don't think you look particularly well in that green hat." Belle had observed. Anna flushed. Usually she never minded Belle's criticism. But her mother and brother and father had remarked the same thing. And Anna herself had hated the hat as soon as she found herself outside the shop. And also she had paid twice as much for it as she could afford. So she was annoyed.

"I don't particularly admire yours," snapped Anna.

Ordinarily Belle wouldn't have been offended. But she was cross. She retorted; Anna snapped again; and five minutes later Belle, her face flushed with anger, was tearing through the heavy rain to her own home. The next day when they met at church Anna, glancing up furtively to see if Belle intended to be friendly again, saw a flushed, angry face. Belle glancing furtively around a moment later to see if Anna were remorseful, met two cold eyes. And after that neither would make an advance.

Every week made the breach wider. The months hurried into years. And it remained. Each suffered, but neither would have admitted it for the world. Then the little girls were born. Each looked furtively at the other baby and was glad and proud that her own was the prettier. The babies grew, became three years old, five and six years old, and started to school. By that time Mrs. Tracy had moved north to be near the lumber yard, so the children attended the same school. Both were pretty little girls who resembled their mothers, and both kept the remainder of the school in a ferment of envy over their clothes, Dainty lace frilled dresses, white buckskin shoes, hair ribbons—Anna was determined that her child should outshine Belle's and Belle was equally determined that she shouldn't.

The teachers frowned thoughtfully in private. The effect upon the other children, whose mothers had not the same money or the same spirit, was not good. One, younger and more impulsive than the others, mentioned at a teachers' meeting to write plainly to Mrs. Jerrod and Mrs. Tracy just what she thought of them. But the others dissuaded her.

The years went on. Small Anna strutted to school a pretty picture. Small Belle was a little peacock, and preened herself with frank conceit. Both were pretty, and when they were playing fast and hard forgot vanity. Then they were simply two gay children, spoiled, but favorites in the playground, as their mothers had been in that same playground twenty years before.

And while each at times reflected the parental attitude, at times they forgot, and, by some inborn affinity, sought each other's company and exhibited great satisfaction in it.

But neither mother knew that. If either had—well, Belle probably would have ignored her husband's convenience and moved back to the south side. And Anna likely would have ordered her daughter to quit speaking to small Belle.

If Belle had known that when she gave her daughter a party on her ninth birthday—a glorious affair of pink ice cream, candles and four kinds of cake—small Belle said regretfully to small Anna, "I wish I could invite you, but my mama doesn't like your mama," and at that small Anna replied scornfully, lifting her sorrel, "Never mind, I don't want to come to your old party. My mama feels the same way," perhaps the feud would have ended.

The next week Anna gave a more glorious party for her daughter, who boastfully described it to small Belle, who in turn was scornful.

It happened that for two or three years Anna and Belle met nowhere except on the downtown streets, where it was easy to see each other, or at parlors, where one could be busy in conversation with some one else and so have preoccupied eyes.

They met one afternoon on a deserted side street as they passed the high board fence of a vacant square of ground much in demand by the school children. It was time for the 3:30 dismissal and each knew some that way to meet her small daughter.

Anna's brown eyes, not so young as they had been ten years before, but still brilliant, flashed haughtily. Belle's chin, fuller and having lost some of its young, soft curve, was lifted superciliously. They swished past each other just as a shrill voice floated from the other side of the fence:

"Say, Belle, all you have to do is to tell your mamma that I've got a bracelet and she'll get you one right away." The words were compellingly toned.

"I shouldn't wonder," small Belle repied in a calculating voice. "And you can work the same dodge for a new parasol. Get a pink one as long as I got a blue. Then we can trade part of the time, and it'll be the same as having two."

It was Belle's turn to start and crane up to the top of the fence. Both women had involuntarily paused. "The little wretch!" said Belle. "And using slang, too!"

"I never knew that Anna guessed!" gasped Anna's mother. "Why, they're growing up!" She eyed Belle in panic.

"Into two vain little schemers!" gasped Belle's mother in dismay. "Oh, Anna, we have been two"—

"Idiots," said Anna. "Oh, Belle, I felt terribly."

"So did I," said Belle sadly. "But I thought you didn't care."

"Ten years wasted!" said Anna. "But"—her eyes snapped—"tomorrow

(Heinrich Heine.)

The best musical criticism I ever listened to, and perhaps the most convincing criticism possible, I overheard at Marseilles last year during a table d'hote. Two commercial travelers were discussing the topic of the day, whether Rossini or Meyerbeer be the greater master. As soon as one had attributed the higher excellence to the Italian master, the other demurred; not with dry words, however, for he trilled some of the especially beautiful melodies from "Robert le Diable." Thereupon the first could find no more convincing repartee than zealously to sing counter passages from "Le Barbier de Seville," and thus did they both continue throughout the repast.

Instead of a noisy exchange of insignificant phrases, they gave us most exquisite table music, and finally I had to admit that people either should not dispute at all concerning music or should do so in this charmingly realistic fashion.

Concerning Fashions and Celebrations Of the Summer in Paris

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—Paris is never deserted by the Americans from April until November, and although this month is socially dead to the French it is quite alive to those from America who are buying clothes, sightseeing, dining well and otherwise spending their money.

The American buyers are all here as many of the openings have taken place in the minor houses and the large ones will open tomorrow. The air is full of the talk of clothes and one can get a clear idea of what may be worn in the near future by what is worn in the present.

At the Ritz it is warm enough to have one's dinner and coffee on the terrace, while the orchestra has been transplanted from the long red hall to the open air under the trees that seem to thrive well in the small enclosure. The French have such a way of simulating open air effects and they do not waste three inches of ground where there is a possibility of transforming it into a garden. Would that the Americans had their gift. How many bare back yards would we be spared!

One always sees a handful of celebrities on this terrace any night, and whether the women are German or America, Italian or Russian they put on the very best decollete gown they own and take out at least a few of the jewels from their box. It is in the air—this wishing to dress well in Paris. You may slip through the other cities with a coat suit and a fanciful blouse, but not Paris.

Princess of Schleswig-Holstein.

The other night there the German Princess of Schleswig-Holstein wore a wonderful gown of white lace touched up here and there with cobweb silver lace. Whatever there was of her bodice in front was covered by a huge black necklace made of twisted black satin stretched to its uttermost ends and caught with brilliants. On each wrist she wore a black bracelet, one of velvet and one of enamell. Both were caught with a crest outlined in diamonds. In her very black hair she wore four diamond pins and the effect of the constant intermingling of black and white was fascinating. Remember the black bracelets. They are quite smart and fit the arms closely just where the hand begins.

Mrs. Widener.

Mrs. Joseph Widener also wore a white gown draped with silver lace. Her bodice was not wired in that new method to give the effect of a ballet dancer, but hung rather closely to her slim young figure. I heard an American behind me say, after looking these two celebrities well over: "I am very glad I had silver lace put on that gown of mine."

Paquin's Designer.

Madame Claire, who is famous as the chief designer at Paquin's next to the wonderful head of the house, and who always wears clothes that are popular in America two weeks after she appears in them, wore at the Ritz for dinner a gown of white brocaded satin mixed with plain white satin and a tight bodice cut like a low jumper of black chiffon stretched over the flesh. The girdle was black and there was a huge black velvet flower in front. As she walked, the skirt opened in front above one ankle, but the full drapery placed it quite apart from the ordinary slashed skirt.

Paviowa in Taffeta.

The designers are showing most attractive frocks in taffeta regardless of the Americans' criticisms against them, and one sees them at all the smart places in the form of half low dinner gowns.

Paviowa, the Russian dancer, wore an exceedingly simple one the other afternoon for tea. It was dark blue, with a short, narrow skirt, showing patent leather slippers that were laced across the instep. The panniers were not extra large,but enough to give the new effect of exploiting that line of the figure between the knees and the hip and making it quite the largest in the silhouette.

The bodice had a round chemisette of white batiste and a row of small red velvet buttons down the front. The long wrinkled sleeves were touched with scarlet in the same way. Ter hat was black, brought well down over the face, quite small, with a most demure bow across the front. She wore the Russian colors, you see, which she has mothered in Paris. It was from her dancing that Paquin and the other designers got their ideas for combined red and blue in every possible way. Last summer at the casino at Deauville the designers were making color notes all the time the Russian ballet was performing.

The Russian Touch.

It is not difficult to trace the link between the fashionable gown of a woman of the hour and the national costume of the Russians when one happens to be in Paris at this season. I was struck with this a day or two ago when a woman came into the shaded courtyard of the Chateau de Madrid for tea; she wore a loose blouse of dark blue taffeta belted high, with a sash of Cossack red that was folded over once in the back and had two short ends pendent.

That same night, at the Folles Bergeres, where the czar's stringed orchestra is playing, the man who does the Slavic dance, and is a huge, dark, half-wild looking person, wore exactly the same blouse with a red sash. It is very interesting to see the original and the copy that close together and put your finger exactly on the spot where the designer got her inspiration.

By the way, those loose blue coats in taffeta or satin with the red sashes are worn by more women than one in Paris and the nearby resorts. They are quite attractive, but it will be difficult to get that red in America, I fear. It is a peculiar shade that every American has commented upon and desired. Now and then one sees a whole gown of it, and again a coat suit with a full blouse of white batiste run with a bit of real Cluny and topped off by a small black hat.

A WONDERFUL OWN.

A wonderful gown was worn that same night at the Folles Bergeres where the Moroccan ministers were assembled in the loges. It was a combination of purple and this new red, and because of the tones of each color it was quite different from another combination that has preceded it. The skirt was of the red satin and the purple was in velvet, very supple panne velvet, draped as a full overskirt from a high waist line. The bodice was of purple chiffon, drawn high in the back and in a low V decolletage in front. The sleeves were of purple chiffon from shoulder to elbow and were finished with tight muffs from elbow to wrist of this Cossack red panne velvet. The slippers were of red suede laced across the instep and over the ankle. With it was worn a black hat, for the French woman puts on a hat at every hour of the day and night that she is not sleeping.

MOROCAN DELEGATES.

The Moroccan delegates have nothing to do with fashions, but they formed a picturesque note in the brilliant audience, with their snow-white wrappings and head dress and some of the younger members in the brilliant blues and scarlets of their national costumes.

The performance was emphatically oriental and many of the dancers, especially the lady who appeared in a costume that consisted of tattooing and a brassiere of diamonds, did not interest the distinguished visitors in the least. They looked a bit bored at most of the acts gotten up for their benefit, but almost fell out the boxes with sheer glee when a popular French comedian sang songs in the language of the pavements.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BED TIME

By Thornton W. Burgess

(Copyright, 1913, by J. G. Lloyd.)

In the early morning Chatterer the Red Squirrel left the Green Forest and scampered along the tumbledown stone wall at the corner of the old orchard. He ducked in and out behind, under, and around the stones of the old wall, all the time keeping the sharpest watch with his bright eyes to make sure that no one saw him. He was thinking of the beautiful white eggs which he was sure were in the home of Drummer the Woodpecker in the old apple tree close by Johnny Chuck's house. He wanted those eggs for his breakfast. It was two days since he had had one, for though he had thought and thought and thought he hadn't been able to think of a plan to get both Mr. and Mrs. Drummer away from their home together, as he had when he had stolen their first eggs and then laid the blame on Sammy Jay. He hadn't any plan now, but he just hoped that something might happen to give him the chance he wanted.

Chatterer hid in a hole between two big stones, where he could watch the home or Drummer the Woodpecker, and waited. He was so intent on this that he didn't look around as he should have, and, so of course, he didn't see Reddy Fox hiding behind the wall. Chatterer had about given up hope of anything happening when his sharp eyes caught sight of something that made them sparkle with eagerness. Could it be? Yes, it was Sammy Jay! There was no mistaking that blue coat. Ha, that was Sammy's voice! Out of his home climbed Drummer the Woodpecker, with Mrs. Drummer close behind him, both screaming, "Thief! Thief!" at the top of their lungs, and after them flew all their neighbors, all intent on driving Sammy Jay out of the old orchard.

This was the chance Chatterer had waited and hoped for. Like a little red flash he scampered across the grass to the apple tree in which Drummer made his home, and was half way up it when Mistah Mocker the Mockingbird dashed at him from his hiding place in the next tree shrieking "Thief! Thief!" at the top of his voice.

At once Sammy Jay turned in that direction and straight back to the old apple tree he came screaming "Thief!" as loud as he could, and close behind him were Drummer and all his neighbors. Now as soon as Drummer saw Chatterer in the tree he knew right away what had brought him there and he forgot all about Sammy Jay.

Chatterer saw him coming and, though he isn't a coward, the sight of so many angry birds was too much for him. He turned to run down the trunk and scamper back to the safety of the old stonewall. But he didn't. No, sir, he didn't go a step farther down the tree. Why? Because there, waiting for him, sat Reddy Fox, and Reddy's teeth looked unpleasantly long and sharp, and Reddy himself looked unpleasantly angry.

But there was no time to sit still. He knew that right away. No, indeed! There were too many sharp bills eager to tear his coat and pull his hair and scratch his face. Like a flash Chatterer squirmed around to the other side of the tree trunk. Then began real trouble for Chatterer the Red Squirrel. Round and round the tree, out one branch, across to another, jumping, twisting, dodging, Chatterer, with all the birds of the old orchard led by Drummer the Woodpecker and Sammy Jay darting and striking at him with their sharp bills, and all screaming "Thief! Thief!" as loud as ever they could. And all the time down below Reddy Fox was dancing about with excitement and hoping that the birds would drive Chatterer out of the tree.

At last, all breathless and torn and bleeding, Chatterer managed to crawl into a little hollow, where even the long bill of Drummer the Woodpecker couldn't reach him. "Oh, dear!" he sobbed. "I wish I had never thought of those eggs!" Or tried to put the blame on some one else," said a voice right outside his hiding place. It was the voice of Sammy Jay, and then Chatterer knew who it was who had been smart enough to find him out and have him so dreadfully punished.

"I'll get even with you, Sammy Jay! See if I don't!" he shrieked. But Sammy Jay only laughed.

Williams Wins Over Coaster In Big Match

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—Of the 148 tennis players who entered the thirty-third annual all-comers' singles championship tournament of the United States National Lawn Tennis association Monday there remain just ten in the list last night. After a day of sensational contests, in which the defeat of William M. Johnston by Norris Williams was the feature, it was conceded that the standard of play had never reached the point of excellence which marked the present tourney.

Williams required four sets in which to win from Johnston, the scores being 6-3, 6-4, 2-6, 8-6, but the margin of victory was far closer than the score of games would indicate. The Californian was forced to bow to the more finished play of his opponent, but not until he had put up a battle which aroused another record gallery in a manner seldom seen at the Casino courts. It was a thrilling battle of racquets and wits and in the end the Philadelphian conquered because of his experience and nochalance under stress of a grueling contest.

Williams displayed his usual indifference to breaks in his game and played as though according to a prearanged plan, using a trifle more care and skill in dangerous pinches than ordinarily. It was this fault that finally gave him the match. In service, volleying, back court and net play, he was little if any superior to Johnston, and it was his placement alone that earned the victory. In nets and outs he gave his opponent point after point, but the skill that comes from long play counted when it came to taking the deciding race at the end of a long rally.

Although the Williams-Johnston match was the grand court feature, the contests on other courts did not lack merit. As we expected, Champion M. E. McLoughlin defeated Robert LeRoy in straight sets and William Clothier likewise won from W. L. Pate. Wallace Johnson and J. R. Strachan also came through another round, defeating respectively, J. G. Brown, Jr., and C. M. Bull, Jr. W. M. Washburn won from R. Evans, Jr., and Leonard Beekman eliminated F. W. Cole after a hard five-set match. The one upset of the day was the defeat of G. P. Gardner, Jr., by Nat Niles in four sets, considering the usual result when these players have met heretofore.

In the interscholastic championship, the semi-finals round was reached with G. C. Caner defeating W. L. McKim and J. H. Webber defeating William Blair. The Harvard and Chicago scholastic title-holders meet for the championship, but the feature of Friday comes in the battle of M. E. McLoughlin and William Clothier for the grand court championship, credited that the winner of this match will next week be acclaimed the United States champion of 1913.

Foreign Stars At Exposition

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—James E. Sullivan, secretary of the Amateur Athletic union, today obtained the promise that a team of German athletes would be sent to San Francisco to compete at the Panama-Pacific exposition in 1915.

In return for this courtesy, it is considered likely that the American team which is to compete in the Greek Olympic games at Athens, in the spring of 1915, will make a trip to Berlin and participate in an athletic meet there.

Representatives of France, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland have given assurances to Mr. Sullivan that their countries would be represented at the exposition by teams of athletes. Hungary also will probably send a team.

Cavet Respected By Dobbs' Club

John Dobbs and his Billiken crew have much respect for Pug Cavet, the Mobile left-hander, and say he is a hum-dinger. They tell a tale about him that makes us think so, too.

Recently when the Gulls and Bilts were battling for first place, Cavet worked in the game that put Mobile out in the lead they have never relinquished. It was the second game of a double-header, and Pug had a black cloth over one eye.

He allowed three hits in six innings and in the second round won his own game by placing a homer over the fence with three men on bases.

Bike Record Broken

PARIS, Aug. 22.—Oscar Egg today broke the world's one-hour bicycle record, unpaced, by covering 43 kilometers, 330 metres (26.82 miles.)

Marcel Berthet on August 7 established a record of 26.35 miles. The American unpaced bicycle record for one hour—25 miles 600 yards—was made by W. W. Hamilton at Denver in 1898.

Defenders Named

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—At the motor races Oragon Kid, Kitty Hawk V., Disturber III and Baby Reliance won the right to contest in the finals Saturday for the $5,000 Wrigley trophy. This event, the most important of the regatta, is open to boats of all sizes.

MURPHY IS JINX; MUST STAY AT HOME

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—John Evers, manager of the Chicago Nationals, considers Charley Murphy, his club owner, to be a jinx. "That's why I left Murphy in Chicago on this trip," says Evers, "for we are anxious to finish at least second in the race. We won seven straight games in Boston and Philadelphia. We are not saying anything about the Giants, but we are going to keep plugging until the end of the season."

FIGHTING FOR SECOND PLACE

BILLY SMITH.

Atlanta's manager, who wants next two games with Billikens so the Cracker club can move into second place with one battle to spare.

JOHNNY DOBBS.

Montgomery mogul, who today has second position by one game margin, and is out to hold it against onslaught of the Cracker crew.

IS PLANK A HAS BEEN? NO WINS SINCE JULY 20

While Connie Mack and his admirers may not be worrying over the outcome of the current pennant race in the American league, one slip-up in the Athletics' machine has arrived, which may upset the dope in the world's series. The slip to wabble is Eddie Plank, marvelous southpaw flinger. He has not won a game since July 20. With the Cleveland Naps winning three out of four from his pacemakers in the important series which just closed the Athletics now have a lead of only 5 1-2 games. Still the majority is picking the Pennsylvania entry to represent the A. L. in October.

With the Athletics in the world's series the wise Mack and his athletes will have to have Eddie Plank pitching as he has for a dozen years and not as he has the past month to regain the blue ribbon title and keep it away from the National league.

WAS GREAT HELP HERETOFORE.

Eddie Plank, and not the Athletics, is slipping. This means danger for Connie Mack, and unless Jck Coombs can get back in shape the Athletics will not rule such top favorites when the two rivals go to the post seven weeks hence.

The Gettysburg southpaw has been a tower of strength to Mack and assistants in winning four pennants, and this one, too, as well as being extremely effective against the Giants. But Plank is in a slump and this beooves Mack & Co. to issue a C. Q. D. call.

Plank started out in hurricane style this year, better than ever before and up to July 20, when he blanked the Browns at Sportsman's park 3 to 0. Did not show any trace of ever weakening. But Plank is and there's the hitch for the Athletics.

Since that July 20 victory Plank has gone to the hill five times, but has not won a game. Four of he has lasted the entire route but once, and that was when the Browns nosed him out July 31, 4 to 3. In the other four atmwronhthiesnheosendtaousBe tempts though Southpaw Ed has been chasing early.

NEED HIM IN BIG SERIES.

Plank may not be needed in the remaining battles with the Naps for the American league pennant. The Athletics are in front by five and one-half games and with the Naps meeting the Nationals and other strong clubs while the Athletics get easy outfits, Mack ought to hold this lead to the stretch.

However, the Athletics will need a southpaw and Jack Coombs to beat the Giants. Plank won from Marquard in the 1911 series, 2 to 1, and is the style of hurler to halt the Giants' attack.

Plank's slip-up may not mean any serious danger in the present flag race, but unless he gets back on his stride something unexpected may occur this October. With Edward missing beware of the Giants.—St. Louis Times.

Fernand Altimani, the champion Italian walker, who recently beat Larner's hour walking record by nine metres, has set up new figures at Milan. During the 60 minutes he covered the distance of 12 kilometres 405 metres or 8 miles 583 yards 1 foot 6 inches. Intermediate records were also beaten. Larner the English champion's record was 8 miles 438 yards, made at Stamford Bridge, London, on September 30, 1905.

Star Hurlers Are to Battle Third Contest

Dent and E. Brown Are Both Rated High and There Promises to Be Some Real Ball Friday Afternoon

With an even break on the first afternoon's hostilities Atlanta and Montgomery renew the fight for second place this afternoon.

There is only one game's difference in the standing of these clubs and that is in Montgomery's column. To take the second place, therefore, Smith's men will have to take both of the remaining games of the series from the Bills.

This afternoon will probably see Conzelman and Chapman doing the battery work for Atlanta and E. Brown for Montgomery.

The Crackers are especially anxious to get Elmer's goat, as he has been sold to Brooklyn and is rated by some as the best in the Southern league. The Crackers, however, wrecked some winning hurler when they hit Bill Prough, and they want Elmer's scalp.

Hardage Is to Coach Mercer

Prof. J. F. Zellers, temporary president of Mercer university, has announced that football practice will begin at Mercer on September 1. The new uniforms have already arrived and will be distributed among the candidates at an early date. A number of old football men have already reported and are anxious for the practice to begin. In opening the practice the first of next month, two weeks of training will be afforded before the season opens.

The team will probably be composed of many old men.

The Mercer authorities have just accepted Lewie Hardage, a graduate of Vanderbilt, and an all-Vanderbilt and Auburn star, to coach the athletic teams. Hardage succeeds Dr. C. C. Stroud, who resigned to go to the University of Louisiana. Hardage made all-southern football team as halfback, and also a place on the all-southern basketball team.

He is fast on his feet, and played a heady game. For the past season Hardage has been playing ball in the Georgia-Alabama league.

SOUTHERNERS WHO STARRED

Bobby Byrne was busy with the stick, getting a home run, a double and a single in five times up.

Joe Jackson batted .666 for the day, getting two out of three.

CHANGES FOR JUST A DAY

The Billikens and the Crackers split, and therefore remain one game apart in their fight for second place. The Gulls after a short idle spell rapped on the Vols and increased their lead over the contestants for second place.

The Giants continue to win without a break in their stride. The Phillies lost. The hundred point lead of the Giants seems to be coming back again.

Bad Weather Hurt Shoot

(By Associated Press.)

CAMP PERRY, O., Aug. 22.—Camp Perry is recovering from the results of a heavy wind and rainstorm, which swept this section shortly after noon Thursday. All of the shooters and the men who were working the targets were driven to shelter and the grounds were too wet to continue shooting, after the storm passed.

The president's match, which opened with the skirmish run and followed with the 600-yard slow fire, was to have concluded the first stage, but the storm made the change necessary and the second stage will be fired Saturday afternoon.

At the end of the first event of the president's match, Captain W. H. Clopton, of Thirteenth United States cavalry, was in the lead with a score of 146; Corporal C. B. Long, of Massachusets, was second with 144.

The Evans skirmish run, which was to have opened the afternoon with eleven teams, will open Friday afternoon, and be concluded Saturday afternoon.

Latest information indicates that seven teams, will open Friday afternoon, land, France, Peru, Argentine, Canada and the United States will take part in the international match, which opens September 1. Germany will be represented in the individual matches, but will not send a team.

Batting Figures

Smashing out six safeties out of seven attempts at the plate, Bisland climbed into the .300 class. Wallop Smith is only three points behind that charmed circle of hitters and is liable to break in most any time.

Hard Driving Won the Meet

SALEM, N. H., Aug. 22.—Walter Cox made one of the best drives of the year at the Grand Circuit meet at Rockingham park and won the Granite stake, valued at $5,000 with Lady Grattan, Reuseus, from the Geers stable, had been counted a certain winner.

Lou McDonald outstepped the field in the opening heat. Tommy Horn led to the wire in the second heat when Lady Grattan nipped him. Lady Grattan led all the way in the third heat. Reusens was running the last twenty yards, but the judges placed him second. In the final heat Lady Grattan broke soon after getting the word and Reusens took the lead in the back stretch. In the last furlong, however, Cox challenged Geers and fairly outraced him.

Tommy Murphy, of New York, never won a closer race than the pacing division of the American Horse Breeder futurity with Tilly Tipton. Of the $3,000 the winner got $2,100, while Homer Baughman and Ella K. K. took $387.50 each.

Bon Ton had no trouble in winning first money in the 2:30 trot. Early, Jr., the Canadian pacer, won the free-for-all pace in which Braden Direct was favorite.

New World's Record Though Not Official

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 22.—Howard P. Drew, of Springfield, Mass., starting 2 1-2 yards behind scratch, won the 120-yard handicap at the Order of Eagles' games in 12 seconds flat.

The world's record for 120 yards, made by Bernard J. Wefers, is 11 4-5 seconds. Referee Brown, of the Boston Athletic association, measured the course over which Drew ran and declared that, although it could not be officially estimated, he was positive that Drew had surpassed Wefers' record.

Errors Helped Both Crackers And Billikens

Bisland and McDowell Featured With Their Run of Hits. Left Field Appeared to Be Hoodoo—Even Break

With Bisland, Smith and Chapman starring with the willow for the Crackers and McDowell hitting like a fiend for the Billikens, Atlanta and Montgomery were able to break even in Thursday's double bill. The first game went to Atlanta, 8-2, and the second to the visitors, 6-3.

In the first game it was just a hitting fest for Atlanta at the expense of Curly Brown, who was driven off the slab, and Charley Case. Bisland in this 6game made four hits in a row, while Long, Smith, Holland and Chapman kicked in with two each.

There were plenty of extra base hitting during the afternoon and errors largely aided each club in putting runners over the pan. Left field appeared to be the hoodoo spot, Jantzen and Long both making a number of critical bobbies just at the wrong time.

Gilbert Price worked for the home clan in the opener and he was very good. He was aided by good fielding and hard hitting and did not have to go his hardest all the time for a victory. But he was there at the right moment.

In the fourth inning of the first game Wallace Smith was hit by a pitched ball, but owing to strenuous objections from the Billiken crew was not allowed to go to first. Smith then came through with a long triple.

Bisland continues to show himself as one of the most valuable players on the Cracker squad. Four successive times in the first game Bisland hit safely and the first two times up in the second mixup it was a hit. He made six hits in seven times up.

Jacinto Calvo, the Cuban outfielder, had the misfortune to receive a hard blow at his throwing arm while at the bat in the second inning and had to quit the game. It is probable that he has a broken bone in his arm and may not be able to again play this season.

Wares contributed a neat fielding play in the first game when he went back of second base and fielding Price's drive with one hand made the throw to first in time to get the runner.

It was Manning vs. Thompson, or Auburn vs. Georgia, in the battle in the second game. Auburn won out though not through any especially strong hurling.

Thompson pitched good ball for a time but all four errors began to creep in back of his work he let up and was hit hard.

Harry Holland made a great play on Bill Elwert in the fifth round of the second game. The ex-Tech star went far over back of the pitcher and fielding a hard roller in time for an out.

McDowell, another collegian, reached first base six successive times in the two games. In the first game he was safe the first time up on an error and the next four times hit safe. The first time up in the second game he also hit safely.

Joe Agler made a sensational play on Snedecor's hard hit over first in the second inning of the second game. Had the ball gotten past the bag it would have meant three sacks.

BY GRANTLAND RICE

Contrary to general comment, the Naps have been in the thick of a pennant melee before well down the closing stretch, but have never had the needed punch to slip by with the kale. The theory that Cleveland always blows up by July fourth makes for humor perhaps, but also for false dope.

Back in 1906 the Naps were only three games from the top late in September. When the showdown arrived they dropped three out of four to the Yanks and faded.

In 1908 they came within one stride of reaching a world series. They fell before the Browns on a close decision by one run and missed gain. They might have won that season by gathering three of heir last ten games from Washington, but they only picked up two of the ten, though Washington was nestling in seventh place.

The Naps have been in the hunt before, but they have always managed to blow just in the nick of time. Through a run of thirty-one years Cleveland has yet to win her first flag, and it will probably be dangerous for the community now if victory ever comes her way. The shock to the community would be terrific, and it's doubtful if the populace could stand up before it without frothing at the gills in a frenzy of hysteria.

In the course of the last ten days the Mackmen furnished the Naps a wonderful opening to close up the gap. They dropped seven out of nine games and yet finally emerged with a six-game lead, having lost but the margin of one battle. If the Naps had closed in during this rickety interval, the effect both ways might have been striking. But it was the same old stuff. At the decisive moment Cleveland was shy of the punch.

Mack's pitching staff has broken badly of late, and unless Plank and Bender swing back into line he can hardly expect his youngsters to pick up and carry the full burden. They were good enough to fill in the gaps, but this and facing a driving finish are widely detached affairs.

If Griff's Senators were as well off today as they were just a year ago no club would have a better show of finishing in front. Griff would then be in position to work Johnson three times a week, and at his present rate of speed this would close up the gap in short order. But 1912 and 1913 are approximately 365 days apart from August to August.

Johnson needs but three games now to tie up his own and Joe Wood's American league record. Six more will ease him up alongside of Rube Marquard. If he can slip by St. Louis, the Johnsonian jinx, he may pound out pitching history within another month, for he is now in great shape and running smoothly. He has the stuff to smash any record ever made. All he needs is the correct break, without which the rest of it is minus zero.

Just at the moment Col. Evers was to be decapitated and deported, his Cubs break loose and claw off seven or eight straight wins. But suppose Johnny finishes second? Frank Chance won four pennants, but we still recall what happened to him when he finally dropped to second place. He may escape with his life if he manages to wind up above the Phillies, but if he finishes no better than third he should lose no time in waiting for a milk wagon to drive through the gate as he dashes for safety with a high powered machine at hand to waft him far beyond Murphy's reach.

A fine of $500 may seem small punishment for the offense against baseball law which Murphy committed. But when you know just what $500 means to Mr. Murphy, a fine of $2.25 would have been a terrible blow, so you can figure how the other must have warped his heart strings.

Want Finn to Manage Mobile Club Another Year

Directors Are Pleased With Manner in Which Team Has Been Worked

Mike Finn will be asked to manage the Mobile club in 1914. This much was learned Monday when several of the directors of the club were interviewed, all of whom expressed themselves anxious to have the present manager return at the head of the club again next season. Whether or not he will accept is not known, but in the opinion of the directors, matters can be so arranged that he will agree to lead the club another season.

Following the publication of articles sent out from Mobile that Mike Finn would be "canned" at the end of this season, the directors of the local club were sought for interviews. "Mike Finn will be tendered a contract to manage the Mobile club next season," said one, "regardless of other matters," and he added that he felt confident the majority of the board of directors wanted Finn to manage the club next year.

Manager Finn was worried by numerous interviewers in New Orleans, after news was sent out from Mobile that Finn was to be "canned." The New Orleans papers printed stories to the effect that he would be let and some of them carried numerous insinuations as to why Finn would be relieved. In a letter from the Gull leader, after finishing on the matter, he states:

"My contract with the Mobile club expires on September 15. They will get the best I have until then. After that it is a case of a new contract or none at all."

Reference was made in stories printed in New Orleans that Manager Finn had not dealt squarely with Mobile in the matter of trades, mentioning the Street and Demaree deals and speaking as these Manager Finn explains that the directors made the price on Demaree. The directors of the club were greatly provoked over the news sent out from Mobile owing to the fact that the club is fighting for a pennant and it could accomplish no good, but would, on the other hand, stir up much strife and after stating that Mike Finn would be tendered a contract to manage here next season, asked that the matter end there for the present.—Mobile Register.

"ENGLISH" WINS OVER SLANG

CHIAGO, Aug. 22.—Slang, as a means of the proper description of baseball games in the newspapers, came out a little behind straicht forward English in the verdict of several thousand readers in a test vote taken by a Chicago newspaper.

Of a total of 2,920 ballots recorded today 2,004 declared for the English prescribed by the dictionaries and 1,926 were in favor of the use of the slang.

The figures in favor of pure English were qualified by several thousand voters who expressed themselves in favor of the use of a moderate amount of the snappy, descriptive phrases, not limited necessarily to dictionary words. Many voted in favor of slang, but advocated the elimination of nicknames. A majority of baseball players, club owners and managers express a preference for pure English.

Journal Team Wins Game

The Atlanta Journal team defeated the Grant Park Elks Wednesday afternoon, 9 to 7. Costly errors by Grant Park and timely hitting won the game for The Journal. Osborne, who relieved Johnson in the fifth, pitched good ball for The Journal, striking out seven men during that time. Thompson, for the Grant Park Elks, hurled well all the way and with tighter support he might have won his game.

Hull at second for The Journal, starred in the field, and Smith's homer and two-bagger was the best hitting of the day. The Journal ran wild on the paths stealing almost at will.

Shut-Out Battle

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 22.—Valdosta defeated Waycross here by the score of 1 to 0 on a muddy, slow field. A drizzling rain fell throughout most of the game, interrupting playing in the first inning for ten minutes.

In spite of the wet ball, Winges pitched remarkable ball, giving up but two hits, while McManus was touched for nine hits. The game was slow because of the muddy field. Medlock led at bat with three hits. He also made a remarkable catch of a long fly in deep center.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

The Coming Poultry Shows

DURING next month there will be many poultry shows held throughout the entire country. The middle or latter part of September will see the beginning of activity in the poultry shows and different kinds of fairs or exhibitions conducted in many of the large cities as well as the small towns. Nashville and Memphis will have the first two shows of the season, then Knoxville. Beginning about the first of October there will be many other shows conducted, especially county shows and there is a good poultry department at every one of these. There will probably never be seen such a display of poultry as will be brought out this season. A great many breeders are making preparations now to make splendid exhibitions at these shows. At Montgomery, Birmingham, Macon, Columbia and Mobile there will be seen a good display of most of the popular varieties of fowls. It is to be hoped that these fowls will be shown in the pink of condition and a good representation from every breeder in the United States be on display at these fairs.

Breeders have long ago found out that they cannot do business or stay in the game unless they get out and exhibit their fowls, and as a rule when judging the birds the man who has his birds in the best condition generally wins with them, showing that it has come now to a matter of condition, almost as much as anything else. Any thoroughbred breeder who has been breeding fowls any length of time knows to perfection the Standard, and without this book it would be impossible to supply the demand they have for fancy fowls. By studying this book carefully most of the breeders can learn themselves how to select and judge a good specimen when they see it. You can take the Standard and select your fancy specimens and put them in the best condition and take them out to the shows. It will enable you to make marks by following the Standard with your birds it makes you more familiar with it. You cannot be too familiar with the Standard requirements with every specimen, and as to the breeding of the Standard as all of the shows are governed by it and are as near alike as possible in selecting the specimens that we wish to take to the shows.

The man who can win this fall and winter will certainly get his share of business next year. The man who stays at home and dose fiot take his birds out and get familiar with the crowds can never hope to get much business. It is a good idea to have your birds in the pink of condition. It is best to take the birds up a few days before the show and handle them several days, getting them gentle and used to being handled as the goes a long way towards the judge making his decision. A bird that has been trained will show off to a good advantage and stand constantly by the judge. You cannot be too careful about your selection and about the birds that you take to the shows this year as everyone who sees them take it for granted that your entire flock is like the sample you are sending.

Thousands of sales and customers have been made by attending the shows that could have never been brought about in any other way. It looks like September will be an ideal month for the raising of chickens and there will be no excuse why you do not get your chickens in fine condition and at least exhibit a few of them this fall at some near-by show. It will pay you better to do this work than anything you can go at connected with the poultry industry.

Yours very truly,

Geo. P. Rice

QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED.

QUESTION.

Darlington, S. C.

I am one of the many chicken cranks, and not unlike others, am frequently confronted with at least some of the difficulties incident to this line of work. I am breeding White Wyandottes, following somewhat the Philo system, in rather narrow quarters on a home city lot. I notice in my pens symptoms of roup, also a slight touch of sore-head. Will you do me the kindness to advise me what to do for those affected, also the best precautions. Upon the first discovery of this slight cough or sneezing, which I call roup (the first I have ever had in my flock) I began the use of Conkey's roup cure, meaning a purplish powder placed in drinking water. I now appreciate any advice you may give me in this matter, thanking you in advance. J. W. B.

ANSWER.

I have had several articles in The Atlanta Journal recently covering your case fully. If you will cut these articles out and keep them they will help you overcome the trouble you are now having. At this season of the year many young chicks have a slight cold. It would be best to see that they are not crowded in their sleeping quarters at night, and sleep as near in the open as possible. Fresh air and plenty of sound whole grain food will give them strength to throw off this trouble without going into roup, and you should continue to use the Conkey's roup cure and also permanganate of potash. The chickens should have plenty of water to drink and by giving plenty exercise and not allowing them to get too hot at night you could get them through this trouble without much loss. For sorehead they should have one tablespoonful of Epsom salts once a week and one tablespoonful of sulphur once a week to every ten to fifteen chickens in soft feed, and apply to the head a mixture of one pint raw linseed oil to which has been added two ounces of carbolic acid. The pens should be treated first as it will go through the entire flock.

IT IS absolutely necessary for chickens to have green food during the winter. This can easily be supplied if you will plant out some patch of rye and rape, they both grow very rapidly and will furnish an abundance of green food all the winter. Now is the time to plant.

THIS is the moulting season and that means that the hens should be fed a good tonic. Pratt's Poultry Regulator and Conkey's Laying Tonic insures a quick and complete moult and that means plenty of eggs during the fall and winter when they bring the high prices. 25c, 50c and $1.00 packages.

AVOID giving your chickens scratch feed with too much corn in it, as it is fattening. Use Red Cob Scratch, the percentage of corn is very small but it has the best kinds of grain that they need now. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

DON'T overlook giving charcoal, it helps to keep down indigestion and it is essential that the chickens have it.

$250 CASH and $30 per month will buy a 6-room bungalow in Inman Park. Has furnace heat and well worth the price.

$2,900 WILL BUY a beautiful 5-room cottage in Grant Park section. Faces car line and only a block from the park. This is a modern and up-to-date little home in every way. Terms $125 cash, balance $20 per month. No loan to assume. What more could you ask for?

WARE & HARPER
724-5 Atlanta National Bank Building

$2,550—Located on a good street in the Grant park section near car line, we offer a splendid six-room cottage, built about a year and a half ago by owner for a home, and the arrangement of the house is as good as one of twice the value. The lot is 50x150, east front and has beautiful shade trees; it has water, gas, porcelain bath, etc. The attractiveness of this proposition is the price. This is really a $3,000 home, but owing to the fact that owner is making change, he is offering it at the sacrifice price of $2,550 on terms of $550 cash, balance $25 per month. This price is for this week only, and if you want a genuine bargain at once, see this.

22 3-4 ACRES ON PEACHTREE ROAD FOR $3,200

THIS IS a real bargain. It is worth every dollar of the price for farming purposes; and everybody knows the results from acreage tracts along Peachtree road. This, like others, will soon sell by the front foot, and it has about $00 of them. It also has a tenant house on it. No it is not located within the city limits. It is just about as far out, figuratively speaking, as Buckhead was a few years ago. It is a beautiful site for a country home, and no property has a better future as an investment.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Actual Work Started Friday on Walker Street Development, and Grading for Tracks Begins Monday—One Building There to Cost $125,000—Edgewood Avenue, Ponce de Leon Avenue and Other Sales—Building and Other Notes

Actual work was started Friday on the Walker street industrial development when workmen began to tear down the houses now standing on the right of way of the spur track, which will extend through the rear of the Walker street property through to Haynes street.

On Monday or Tuesday steam shovels will begin to grade for the tracks, the grading contract having already been let and the tracks, which will be used jointly by the Southern and A. B. & A. railroads, will be laid within thirty days. The forty-five days. The tracks will represent an outlay of about $25,000.

Official announcement that work had been started on the development was made Friday by Ernest Duncan, secretary of the syndicate behind this development.

The syndicate owns nearly 2,000 feet of frontage on Walker street, and its property holdings there represent over $100,000. This frontage will be improved with buildings as fast as there is demand for them, and several concerns are now negotiating for space. It is planned to improve every foot of the Walker street frontage.

VALUE OF BUILDINGS.

Some idea of the value of the buildings may be gained from the fact that 80% of them, which the syndicate is now figuring on, will cost $125,000. It will be of concrete construction, three stories high and 200 feet long.

The syndicate figures that while this is a wholesale district, the installation of wholesale concerns will result in the introduction of retail business also. The syndicate is behind another plan for the widening of Walker street, and will join other property owners in closing a strip sufficient for widening purposes.

EDGEWOOD AVENUE SALE.

Papers have gone to record conveying from George J. Dexter to the Atlanta Real Estate company a large vacant lot on Edgewood avenue east of Howell street. The consideration was $11,500, or $110 a front foot.

This property is on the north side of the street, 125 feet east of Howell street. The lot has a frontage of 110 feet and a depth of 161.2. The transaction was handled by Forrest & George Adair.

OTHER SALES.

E. L. Harling has sold for D. H. Strauss to John B. Richards 250 Glenwood avenue, a six-room cottage on a lot 50x125, for $2,300, and for a Mr. Wilson to W. P. Outcault, a vacant lot on Josephine street, 45x136, for $1,000.

PONCE DE LEON SALE.

The Robert A. Ryder Realty company has sold for A. N. Sharp to Arthur S. Harris, 524 Ponce de Leon avenue. The consideration was $11,000.

This is a two-story, eight-room house on a lot 50x231.

MONEY DEALT OUT.

Market reports from New York said Friday that Atlanta's share of that $50,000,000 crop-moving fund had been sent by the treasury department.

Atlanta, Richmond and Memphis, according to this advice, received $750,000 each.

This money will be distributed by the Atlanta banks to the small banks of the state, who will use it in financing the crop movement.

BUILDING NOTES.

More residence permits were granted on Friday. There was a $4,000 residence on North Moreland avenue; a $3,000 one on Williams, and a third one on St. Charles avenue of $2,750.

Residence permits tell the story of the city's growth and show that money matters are getting easy. Incidentally labor is employed and the material men set business.

BLEASE AND TREASURER IN HOT ROW OVER LOAN

South Carolina "Broke" for First Time Since Hampton's Election in 1876

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 22.—Governor Blease and State Treasurer Carter were the principals in a stormy meeting of the sinking fund commission here today trying to straighten out the tangle in the matter of the state loan.

Treasurer Carter returned the six notes to the governor with his name erased and Blease stated he was going to send the loan controversy to the legislature in a special message and "give Carter the devil."

The state is "broke" and the treasury absolutely depleted for the first time since the Democrats redeemed the state under General Hampton in 1876.

Says "He Spent Five Days Thursday Night" At Police Station

Asiman about forty-two years of age, who says his name is Ed Hogan and that he is an actor from New Orleans, is lodged at police headquarters charged with being insane.

He says he arrived in Atlanta Thursday morning, coming here to marry a Miss Marie Bird, but a search by the police does not reveal the whereabouts of such a Miss Bird.

He was arrested Thursday afternoon at Five Points by Detective Ed Harper, after several passersby, mostly women, had complained he stared at them offensively.

After spending one night at the police lockup Hogan Friday morning declared he had been in Atlanta six days and had spent five whole days at the police station Thursday night.

It is charged that Hogan went into a soda fount at Five Points and asked a soda clerk for a nickel and when told nickels were not given away there, began to treat the clerk to a silver and greenback roll from his own pockets. His money, however, was returned to him.

Grade Crossing Fight

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ROME, Ga., Aug. 22.—A big fight is being made by citizens of the east side against the proposed grade crossing of the tracks of the Rome Railway and Light company across those of the Southern railway. An effort is being made to have the city council pass an ordinance forbidding the crossing, and the opposition has been made to erect a viaduct over the railroad tracks, with the city and county, the street railway company and the Southern Railway company sharing the cost.

CHINESE THREATEN TO BOMBARD GERMAN SHIP

Southern Revolutionaries Claim Gunboat Fired on Rebel Position

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—Advices received by the German foreign office today from Nanking, China, indicated that trouble is impending between the German naval officers and the southern revolutionaries, who threaten to bombard the German consulate and the German cruiser Emden.

The insurgent leader sent a letter to the German consul at Nanking declaring that the Emden had bombarded the rebel position in Lion hill and announced his intention of retaliating on the German cruiser and consulate. The consul denied the allegations.

The German armored cruiser Chanhorst has been sent to Nanking.

Claw Hammer Used as Medical Instrument

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 22.—Perhaps for the first time in the history of medical science a claw hammer was used as a local hospital today as a medical instrument. Willie Long, a negro, was brought to the hospital with a knife blade four inches long sticking into his backbone, driven there by an unknown negro.

The doctors tried every ordinary means to remove it without avail. Finally the claw hammer was brought into requisition, a board placed across the negro's back, and with the hammer adjusted beneath the knife handle and the blade drawn out just as one might draw a nail from a box.

LAD CAME TO VISIT; NOW HAS FRACTURED SKULL

Yancey Lovelace, the seven-year-old nephew of Jno A. Copeland, deputy insurance commissioner of Georgia, lies in a local sanitarium, suffering from a fractured skull as the result of a fall from the high retaining wall around the Marlborough apartments at the corner of Peachtree and Pine strets, last Thursday night.

The little fellow came to Atlanta a few days ago from his home in Brewton, Ala., to pay a visit to his relatives, who reside in the Marlborough. The boy was playing on the wall, which is seven feet in height, when he lost his balance, falling to the cement pavement below, his head striking the hard surface.

Attracted by the noise, Mr. and Mrs. Copeland and others living in the apartment rushed to the scene and the unconscious form was picked up and taken to a hospital.

At 2 o'clock Friday attending physicians stated that the child showed some improvement and stood an excellent chance for recovery.

COLUMBUS TO CELEBRATE LABOR DAY AT BIG PARK

COLUMBUS, Ga., Aug. 22.—Columbus is to celebrate Labor day in an elaborate manner this year, extensive plans and preparations being already under way for the event. Wildwood park has been selected as the site for the principal exercises which are to be given under the auspices of the Federation of Labor of Columbus.

It was announced by the program committee today that details were being arranged rapidly and that the entire program would be completed and out by next Tuesday or Wednesday. Many interesting features will be on the program and a number of prominent labor leaders from other cities will speak.

BANGALORE, India, Aug. 22.—Fifty miners were killed today when the cage in which they were riding in the Mysore gold mine fell to the bottom of the shaft.

DANGER IN EATING MEAT

Statistics Show That People Who Eat Meat Are Susceptible to Typhoid Fever

The death rate of Typhoid has been 19 per cent for many years. Even if the patient recovers, there is danger. Weakened constitution, languidness, loss of energy, and other after effects.

In a majority of cases typhoid fever is directly traceable to an inactive liver which has left masses of meat particles undigested in the alimentary canal. This mass putrefies and sends out death dealing poisons, to result in typhoid fever.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is the greatest known liver stimulant. Its action is gentle, yet effective. It draws water to the alimentary tract, flushes stomach and bowels, washes away the undigested meat particles and removes the danger of fermentation. The blood is purified through the renewed activity of the liver.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT does not cause nausea and vomiting; no dangerous after-effects as with calomel. Don't take an inferior substitute; many imitate the name but cannot produce the same natural, flushing action of the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. At all druggists, 25c. If your druggist cannot supply you upon receipt of price, full size jar mailed postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

"THE TEST OF TIME"

Below we offer three investments that are good examples of the class of property that is always salable, always in demand, and which is never affected by conditions caused by speculation, or inflated values in non-income producing property.

These investments are in good sections, will always stay rented, and will always produce a fair return on the money invested.

AUBURN AVENUE INVESTMENT

52 FEET from the corner of Jackson street, fronting 104 feet on Auburn avenue, and running through to Mitchell, 140 feet to Old Wheat street, we offer six houses, bringing in an income of $57 per month. Take into consideration the fact that this piece of property is near three good car lines, through to block, and has a steady, monthly income of $57. These facts assure a steady enhancement in value of the property, meanwhile bringing in a substantial income. Price, $9,000. Terms.

NO. 116 N. BOULEVARD CORNER OLD WHEAT

THIS is a 12-room house, rented to two families at $25. for both. Right in the corner of lot is a beautiful place to build a store. Somebody ought to buy this property and make a rent-paying investment. Price $5,000.

GOOD RENTING PROPERTY

WE OFFER a corner proposition that has all the requisites of a "good buy," namely: It is a corner; has a steady income of $80 per month; has a good operating value, being in the Terminal Station district and only three blocks from the A., B. & A. railroad freight depot.

This property is near Davis street, on a corner lot, 100x100 feet; has three houses and room for one more. Price, $9,250. Terms.

Confesses to Theft of Money Package—Ready to Pay for His Fun

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

WAYCROSS, Ga., Aug. 22.—Following his arrest in Savannah for failure to account for $1,000 of money, B. F. Lakin came here from Indiana several months ago. The poor pay of the express company is given as one reason why he took the money. He went out for a good time, according to his statement and is now ready to pay for it.

WILSON BARRED FROM GIFT BY REPUBLICAN

President's Request to Congress for Permission to Accept Statue Denied

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Passage of a senate resolution authorizing President Wilson to accept a bust of William Pitt, presented to the women in England, was blocked in the house today by Republican Leader Mann, who objected that the statue should be placed in the White House. Mr. Mann declared the White House already was crowded and insisted there was room in the Smithsonian Institution or other government buildings. He proclaimed a high admiration for Pitt, but insisted on his objection.

President Wilson recently asked congress for authority to accept the gift. Many constitutional lawyers declare it was not necessary.

Interest in Wants

Even after only a casual reading The Journal Want Ads command a great deal of interest.

The reason, as many Journal Want Ad readers declare, is the reliability and speedy action of the Journal Want Ad service in comparison to every other method of reaching the whole buying public.

There are always special chances a plenty to be had through Journal Want Ads. Immediate household needs are satisfactorily met and the whole buying public is instantly reached.

Lupus Worst Form of Skin Diseases

Here is a Home Treatment that Overcomes even Worst Cases.

Lupus or any other Skin Disease will go Skulking Away if you use S. S. S.

A tiny pimple spreads to the side of the face and often covers the cheeks and bridge of the nose. It is very destructive to the tissues of the skin. No external treatments will overcome it as the cause of lupus is from impurities in the blood supply. The only known method of cure is to get the blood supply under the control of S. S. S., the famous blood specific. Its action is quite remarkable and has direct influence upon the network of small blood vessels and glands in the skin.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. For literature, address Swift Specific Co., 183 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga. Do not allow some jealous clerk to lure you into the atmosphere in eloquence over something "just as good" as S. S. S. Beware of all substitutes.

LEGAL NOTICES.

GEORGIA, Fulton County—To the Superior Court of said county: The petition of W. N. Tumlin and George W. Tumlin respectfully shows:

1. That they desire for themselves, their associates and successors, to be incorporated and made a body corporate under the name and style of TUMLIN BROTHERS COMPANY for the period of twenty (20) years.

2. The principal office of said company shall be in Atlanta, said state and county aforesaid, but petitioners desire the right to establish branch offices and places of business within the state as may be determined by the board of directors and the holders of a majority of the stock may so determine.

3. The purpose of said corporation is pecuniary gain to itself and its shareholders.

4. The objects for which the corporation is formed are:

(A). To buy, sell or otherwise to deal or traffic in cotton, tobacco, cigarettes, seed and merchandise generally of all kinds and descriptions.

(B). To establish, operate and maintain stores for the purpose of dispensing soft drinks of all descriptions whatsoever.

(C). To manufacture cigars, cigarettes, pipes and all other similar articles or their accessories; to manufacture and sell syrups and all other articles incident to the sodawater business.

(F). To hold for investment, or otherwise to use, sell or dispose of, any stocks, bonds, purchase money notes or other property, personal or mixed.

(G). To lend money and to take any form of security therefor authorized under the laws of this state.

5. The capital stock of the said corporation shall be fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars with the privilege of increasing the same to the sum of one hundred thousand ($100,000) dollars by a majority vote of the stock, which stock to be divided into shares of one hundred ($100.00) dollars each, sixty per cent of the amount of capital to be paid in before it shall have been actually paid in.

6. Petitioners desire the right to have the subscriptions to said stock paid in money or property to be taken at a fair valuation.

6. Petitioners desire the right to sue and to be sued, to plead and to be impleaded, to have and use a common seal and to make all necessary by-laws and regulations and to do all other things that may be necessary for the successful carrying on of the said business, including the right to execute notes and bonds in evidence of indebtedness incurred, or which may be incurred, in the conduct of the business of the corporation and to secure the same by mortgage, security deed or other form of lien under the existing laws.

7. They desire for the said corporation the power and authority to apply for and accept amendments to its charter, and to change or substance by a vote of a majority of its stock outstanding at the time. They also ask for authority for said corporation to wind up its affairs, liquidate and discontinue its business at any time they may desire so to do by a vote of two-thirds of its stock outstanding at the time.

8. They desire for said corporation the right of renewal and succession as provided by the laws of Georgia, and that it have all other rights, powers, privileges and immunities as are incident to like corporations under the laws of this state.

WHEREFORE, petitioners pray to be incorporated under the name and style aforesaid with the powers, privileges and immunities herein set forth and such as are or may hereafter be allowed a corporation of similar character under the laws of Georgia.

PREPARED BY ROOT AND GROVER MIDDLEBROOKS, Petitioners' Attorneys.

ARNOLD BROYLES, Clerk.

GEORGIA, Fulton County.—I, Arnold Broyles, clerk of the superior court of said county, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the application for charter of Tumlin Brothers Company as the same appears on file in this office.

Witness my official signature and the seal of said court, this 7th day of August, 1913.

ARNOLD BROYLES,
Clerk Superior Court, Fulton County, Ga.

J. S. Donaldson, G. P. Donaldson and J. M. Pebbles, to whom was referred the petition for a new road, to be known as Andrews avenue, the same beginning at a point where the line dividing land lots 125 and 126, of the 17th district Fulton county, intersects Peachtree road, and running thence along said land lot line for a short distance and thence through the northeast corner of land lot 125 to Paces Ferry road, said new road to be 50 feet wide, having made a favorable report on the same as by law petition, this is to notify all persons that petition will be granted at a session of the commissioners of roads and revenues of Fulton county, to be held at 10 o'clock a. m., on Wednesday, September 3, 1913. If no good and sufficient cause to the contrary is shown.

TO BE NATURALIZED?

Thaw has been advised by certain of his counsel, it was learned today, to buy property in Canada and take steps to become naturalized as a British subject. This, it was held, would prevent his deportation.

Thaw appeared this morning to have spent a restless night. His hair was disheveled, his collar awry and his eyes staring. His breakfast, laid out on a bench for him, had not been touched. He said again today that he hoped soon to be able to give an account of his escape. Today he was jotting down notes on the incidents. He had been supplied with the New York and Montreal papers and read every word bearing on his case.

AN "INSIDE" MOTIVE.

The "inside" motive for the immigration authorities causing the Thompson case to be postponed lies in the fact that the charge on which he is held is punishable only with a fine. He could pay this at once and decamp for parts unknown. The warrant from Dutchess county, charging him with conspiracy is not regarded as sufficient basis for extradition. To patch up this loophole more time is needed.

Thaw broke away from his lawyers last night long enough to frame a telegram to a friend in Pittsburg, saying that he (Thaw) had telegraphed through a third party to ex-Governor Stone, of Pennsylvania, asking him to appeal to Secretary Bryan in his behalf. Thaw added that he was the "victim of some underhand influence from some other state exercised to prevent his journeying to his own home."

The governor of the Sheibrooke jail laughed today when asked if special guards had been detailed to watch Thaw. He denied this, but it was understood that precautionary measures had been taken at the request of District Attorney Conger, of Dutchess county, and his allies, the immigration authorities.

Bryan Wires U. S. Cannot Act Officially

"This case of Thaw, being one on which, in its present aspect as involving the application of Canadian immigration laws, this government cannot act officially, steps have been taken to lay the information as to his escape informally before the Canadian authorities."

Sulzer asked that the Canadian immigration authorities be requested to return Thaw to Rouses Point, N. Y.

Glynn Requests Thaw's Apprehension in Vermont

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Acting Governor Glynn today requested Governor Fletcher, of Vermont, to have Harry K. Thaw apprehended to await requisition in case the Canadian authorities deported Thaw to that state.

Bryan's Telegram Not Yet Received

DUBLIN, N. H., Aug. 22.—Secretary of State Bryan's personal telegram, notifying the British ambassador, Sir Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice, that Harry K. Thaw, wanted in the United States, was held in Canada and the subject of probable deportation proceedings, had not been received at the summer embassy here this morning.

"If I find that it is a matter requiring the official attention of the Canadian authorities I shall simply forward the message of the secretary of state to Ottawa," said the ambassador. "Extradition of prisoners is not a matter for the diplomatic department."

Thaw Went 80 Miles An Hour in Escape

ROCHESTER, N. H., Aug. 22.—Automobile No. 36824, N. Y., in which Harry K. Thaw escaped from Matteawan, attained at times a speed of eighty miles an hour, in the expert opinion of Richard R. Fox, who today took possession of the rented car of John Collins, of New York, the owner.

Fox said that he found all the tires in bad shape. The machine was not badly damaged.

FRANK COLLIER HANGED FOR ROBINSON MURDER

(By Associated Press.)

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 22.—Frank Collier, a negro, was hanged in the county jail this morning for the murder of Morris Robinson, another negro, a little more than a year ago. The execution was without unusual incident. Collier will be given a big funeral from his mother's house on Sunday.

pending a possible move by a member of the Georgia delegation. The judiciary committee, although in possession of the papers in the case, is without power just at this time to make an official investigation. The house of representatives alone can empower the committee to proceed with an official inquiry, and such inquiry, if made, will be the result of a resolution of the house. This resolution, no doubt, will be offered by a Georgian, if as stated the charges demand a further investigation.

GEORGIAN WOULD MAKE MOTION.

It is recognized generally in Washington that the motion for impeachment, if made at all, should be made by a Georgia congressman, inasmuch as Judge Speer's jurisdiction and all of his alleged unlawful acts apply almost entirely to Georgia and Georgians. It has been the unbroken custom in impeachments against federal district judges for the impeachment motion to be offered by a congressman from the state in which the accused judge has jurisdiction.

At today's conference of the Georgia congressmen this feeling was manifest and expressed several times. The Georgians expressed belief that their obligations to their constituents demanded that they act, if the evidence showed Speer to be a corrupt judge.

The attitude of the delegation as regards Speer is well represented in the following communication which Congressman Hardwick today sent to the Augusta Herald, in response to a request concerning the case:

"As yet I know nothing of the charges against Judge Speer, except what you will see in the newspapers. The Georgia delegation will investigate the evidence at an early date, and I think that I can say for the entire delegation that we will approach the subject with open minds and that we have no desire whatever except to discharge our duty and to do even and exact justice to the public and to the accused judge.

"We will take no steps in the matter unless the evidence amply justifies it and our duty seems to require it. I am sure that if an impeachment resolution is offered in the house, the judge will be given full opportunity to present his side of the matter to the committee on the judiciary before any action on such resolution is had."

Members of the judiciary committee today remained silent concerning the charges in the special examiner's report and it was impossible to get further details concerning the specifications under the general charges that have already been published. It is reported, however, that some of these are of a sensational nature, and it is declared that the impeachment, if ordered, will eclipse in interest the recent impeachment of Judge Archbald, of Pennsylvania. Regret was expressed today of the possibility of politics being injected into the case.

PROGRESIVES TO CALL REORGANIZATION MEET

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Progressive Republicans identified with the "conciliation" committee selected at the Chicago conference will take up at once with Chairman Hilles, of the Republican national committee, the question of calling a general reorganization convention.

The original plan was to call a meeting of the national committee within a sixty days of the adjournment of congress. Senator Cummins and other leaders have determined to urge Chairman Hilles to act at once, as the prospect of an adjournment of congress is remote.

If this ends Huerta by making it impossible for him to raise a cent with which to maintain his army and his government, the president will not grieve. He believes Huerta and all others who seek power by bloodshed in a republic should be condemned by the world in a way that will make that method of securing control of a government impossible.

It would appear that the president thinks it will finish Huerta. To those who talked with the president today he reiterated his firm determination not to recognize Huerta government, and he let it be known that he did not care how widely the news of his determination was disseminated nor how often repeated.

Moreover, so sure does he feel of his ground, that today he said to many visitors he did not have the slightest idea it would be necessady for the United States to intervene with force of arms in Mexico. Neither did he at this time entertain the slightest intention of doing anything of the kind.

While the president has not said anything to that effect, it is the belief that he has received encouragement in his course from at least some of the other powers. This deduction comes from the apparent certainty of those close to the administration that Huerta will last very litle longer.

It is no secret among those in the confidence of the administration that Huerta is so hard up, that his soldiers are not being paid, and if the powers of Europe stand with the United States it will not be possible for Huerta to raise any money. With an army made up largely of mercenaries and ex-convicts, a well filled war chest is a prime necessity. Upon this situation, it is believed, rests the confidence that Huerta is about to "see his own finish."
